ONE SECTION OF DECORATIONS IN PLACE THIS MORNING.

Lafayette Marne Day, Friday, Sept. 6th, which commemorates not only the anniversary of the birth of General Lafayette but the anniversary of the first battle of the Marne as well, is to be observed here with a rousing mass meeting on the Common, Friday evening. Mayor Ashley some time ago received a communication from the national Lafayette Day committee which is composed of such men as Theodore Roosevelt, Charles W. Eliot and Moorfield Story urging that New Bedford in common with the nation observe this day. The mayor turned the matter over to the patriotic committee of the Committee of 100 of which Charles N. Serpa is the chairman, and plans are now practically completed for the celebration. In a letter which the committee has from Maurice Leon of New York, who is active in urging this celebration, an appeal is made for all nationalities to participate in the observance as it marks an epoch in the common struggle of the French, British and American nations for freedom. Especial stress is laid in the letter on the valiant part played by the British at the Marne.

Among the features of the observance here as planned by the Committee of 100 and the French Chamber of Commerce is an address by Dr. Ubalde Paquin, a well known French physician and a deep student of French history. At this time the Liberty chorus will sing under the direction of Rodolphe Godreau and among the songs the chorus will sing are "The Old Folks at Home," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," "Over There," "Smile, Smile, Smile," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and the national airs of the Allies. A band of sixty pieces will accompany the chorus. Patriotic movies will also form part of the program. The committee of 100 has secured 10,000 buttons which will be distributed free at the stores, theaters and at the Standard office.

THEY'VE STUCK TOGETHER FROM THE DAYS OF HORSE CARS TO DAYS OF STAGGERED STOPS

Sept 1 - 1918

Upper Left—Herbert E. Davis. Lower Left—Arthur F. Taber. Standing by Car at Left Is Albert H. Sawyer. At Right—William L. Kelley.

CREWS TOGETHER FOR MANY YEARS

When Changes of Runs Came These Men Always Succeeded in Getting the Same Electric Car.

From the days of horse cars to the days of staggered stops is quite a jump but the Union Street Railway employs four men who have worked in pairs since those days and are still pulling along in harness together.

They are William L. Kelley of 297 Cedar street, better known to his many friends as "Bill" Kelley, and Albert H. Sawyer of 109 Durfee street. Sawyer is motorman on the Mt. Pleasant line and Kelley is his conductor. They have been in the service of the company for the better part of 29 years each and are planning to serve out another quarter of a century together on the same line.

The other pair who have defied all attempts of chance to separate them are Herbert E. Davis of 135 Locust street and Arthur F. Taber of 47 Shawmut avenue. They have both served together on the cars since the days of long ago and are wearing 30 years service stripes on their arms. The six gold bars which these 30 years of labor are represented by, also represent more than 20 years of company together. Of late years this pair have been taking the Padanaram line and their passengers have good reason to know them as a couple of fine friends. Kelley and Sawyer worked together in the days when horse cars were to be seen everywhere and they too have succeeded in hanging together through the many vicissitudes of a railroad man's life.

All four express hearty hope that another 30 years may flit by as lightly as these 30 have and although they may be getting old in years, in spirits each and all of them is the mate of any youngster just "breaking in."

past three years is exceptionally well qualified for her work here. She trained for social service work at the Boston School for Social Workers and after completing her course there became connected with the Boston Associated Charities. She was in Boston for six years and then went to Utica, N. Y. where she organized the Associated Charities. While in Utica, she had much experience with textile industries which will be of much value to her in New Bedford. Miss Carpenter had great success in Utica and left the organization there in flourishing condition when she went to Stamford, Conn., after being in Utica for over three years. While in Stamford, Miss Carpenter had much experience in Red Cross work conducting three extension courses.

NEW BEDFORD MEN WOUNDED WITH CANADIANS

Sept 17- 1918

Nathaniel Parr.

Mrs. Alice Parr of 325 Earle street has been notified that her husband, Nathaniel Parr, a private in the 23d reserve battalion had been admitted to number seven stationary hospital at Boulogne, France, and was convalescing after being wounded in the left leg while charging with his comrades.

Private Parr was formerly employed at the Bennett mills and enlisted in the Canadian army last February. He was shipped to the other side the following month and only recently moved up to the front for a spell in the trenches. He was attached to the infantry.

Daniel Waterhouse.

Daniel Waterhouse, son of Mrs. Alice Waterhouse, of 13 Harmony street has been reported in the official Canadian casualty list as having sustained a gunshot wound in the right thigh. He enlisted in the Mac Lean Kilties a year ago last June and trained in Canada preparatory to going overseas. He was attached to the infantry and is now recovering from his hurts at a stationary hospital at Wimereux, France. Prior to joining the Kilties, Waterhouse was employed in the Acushnet mills.

New Bedford Boy Seriously Wounded In Action Aug. 10

Sept 3 1918

Word was received in this city yesterday from the war department that Private Carleton E. Chase, an infantryman, was severely wounded in action on Aug. 10.

His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Chase, formerly lived at 36 Foster street, but have moved to Marion, where Mr. Chase is seriously ill.

Mr. Chase, who was at one time color bearer of the Howard M. E. Brigade, enlisted in this city in 1912 and after spending two months at a New York fort, was transferred to Fort McPherson, at Atlanta, Ga.

In 1914 he went with the 17th U. S. infantry, of which he was a member, to Eagle Pass, Tex., on the Mexican frontier, and after the trouble went back to Fort McPherson.

His regiment went early to France, and has lately been in the thick of the fight.

He is well known in New Bedford, having attended the New Bedford High school, where he took part in the athletics of the school. The young man is an ex-member of the class of 1919 of the New Bedford High school. He enlisted in the U. S. navy, Dec. 6, 1916, at the age of 16 years. While at high school Brownell played on the football team and took several prizes in swimming contests. He is an expert swimmer and diver and competed in several swimming contests while his ship was stationed in southern waters. The young man is also a nephew of Benjamin B. Barney, city

NEW TREASURER OF THE HOOSAC

Sept 15 1918

Harold M. Coxen of This City Assumes Duties at North Adams Monday---Succeeded by Alfred P. Wilbor.

Harold M. Coxen, for nine years chief bookkeeper at the New Bedford Cotton Mills corporation, has severed his connection with that organization in order to become treasurer of the Hoosac mill of North Adams.

Mr. Coxen succeeds Robert W. Prentice, who has been acting as treasurer of the Hoosac mill and has at the same time been connected with the Butler-Prentice selling establishment in New York city, which acted as selling agents both for the Hoosac mill and also for the New Bedford Cotton Mills corporation. Mr. Prentice will devote all of his attention in the future to the New York city establishment, and Mr. Coxen will take up his new duties in North Adams next Monday.

Alfred P. Wilbor, son of the late H. C. Wilbor, will succeed Mr. Coxen as bookkeeper for the New Bedford Cotton Mills corporation, having been Mr. Coxen's assistant there for some time.

Mr. Coxen is a native of New Bedford, having graduated from the New Bedford High school in the class of 1900. He has had considerable experience in the cotton manufacturing business since his graduation from school, having been connected successively with the Bristol mill, the Grinnell mill and the Acushnet mill, before taking up his work for the New Bedford Cotton Mills corporation. The Hoosac mill of which he is to become treasurer, is a fine goods plant, manufacturing much the same kind of material as is made in the New Bedford Cotton Mills plant. It is equipped with 80,000 spindles and 2200 looms, being therefore slightly larger than the New Bedford establishment.

LOVING CUP PRESENTED LAST EVENING BY POST 190, G. A. R., TO GEORGE E. MACOMBER

Oct 10

About a dozen of the comrades of Post 190, G. A. R., assembled last evening at the new bungalow home of George E. Macomber on Rounds street and presented him with a very handsome loving cup, in appreciation of the many kind favors rendered to the comrades as an associate member of the post, and the deep interest he has shown for the welfare of the comrades.

The cup was presented by Past Commander Henry W. Mason in his suave and able manner, which was replied to by Mr. Macomber in a way that showed he highly appreciated the gift.

The donors were Clarence A. Bearse, George R. Deane, Frederick A. Hathaway, George A. Jencks, William H. H. Jennings, Captain James Marquand, Henry W. Mason, Charles E. Pierce, Mortimer Searles, Captain Edward B. Smith, Stephen B. Weaver and Captain Harvey H. Webber.

The inscription on the cup reads: "Presented to George E. Macomber by Comrades of Post 190, G. A. R., Oct. the 8th, 1918."

The evening was passed very pleasantly by all present, the comrades indulging in war reminiscences and singing the old war songs of '61 to '65.

The refreshments furnished by Mr. Macomber were all that could be desired, especially the delicious ice-cream prepared in that unique manner that is highly enjoyed by all of Mr. Macomber's patrons.

Comrade Thomas J. Gifford, commander of Post 190, was an invited guest.

Some idea of how a Battery D man would look in France when the Huns begin to pepper the boys with mustard shells and chlorine gas and such things is conveyed by these pictures of Corporal Eliot S. Vaughan, taken this past week during his furlough home. Corporal Vaughan brought back with him a French and an English gas mask and in the photograph is wearing them. From peach stones carbon is secured and this is used to absorb and neutralize the poisonous gases. The masks are heavily treated with chemicals and when a soldier is at the front, they are always worn slung in front of the chest ready for immediate adjustment.

Had Been in Thick of Fray For Nearly a Year.

Mrs. Henry Walker of 48 Jouvette street learned yesterday through a cablegram received from the English war office her husband, Henry Walker, a member of the 13th battalion, Canadian Black Watch, was dead from wounds received in action August 30.

He had been at the front for nearly a year, sailing overseas with the Canadian Kilties in October, 1917. Walker enlisted at the British recruiting station in Boston, June 21, 1917. He was sent to Montreal for preliminary training, remaining there until October.

It was only last week when Mrs. Walker received an encouraging letter from her husband in France telling her that all was well, but he anticipated soon entering the thickest of the fray. He was a "vet" of several previous English encounters and had escaped all without a scar.

Walker was a native of Preston, England, and had been a resident of this country for but four years when he responded to his native country's call for volunteers. Here he was employed at a south end mill. He was a member of the Alpha lodge.

Fairhaven Soldier Finds Town Girl in Same Ward.

A human interest story has come across the water from the battle fields of France, having to do with Fairhaven people.

Charles F. Swift, Jr., and Marion Mantius of Fairhaven were school children together. They went through grammar and High school together, and when Charles and Marion parted as classmates at graduation in the natural course of events, with no stronger ties than friendship, their paths would have been along different directions.

But Charles became a U. S. soldier, was sent to France to fight the Germans, was promoted to sergeant, was wounded and sent to a base hospital for treatment.

Marion became a Red Cross nurse, and in the urgent call for nurses to go abroad to take care of the Allies soldiers, she was sent to France, and was sent to a base hospital.

It is nothing more than a coincidence, but the young man and young woman who grew up as children together, went through school together, finally met in a base hospital in far distant France, and it so happened that the young soldier was sent to the [illegible] in which Marion was one of the

Everett H. Fuller of 51 Borden street has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the sanitary corps of the United States army, and has been ordered to report immediately for duty at Camp Johnson at Jacksonville, Fla. Fuller is a graduate of the New Bedford High school and also of the New Bedford Textile school, where he took a special course in chemistry, which fitted him for his work with the sanitary corps.

He enlisted last July and was sent away to Fort Slocum to train. At Fort Slocum it was discovered that he was an expert in chemistry, and as or order had been given out ordering all chemists to remain in this country he was held while his original company sailed to France. He was sent to Fort Oglethorpe and then to Camp Johnson. When that cantonment was turned into an artillery instruction camp, Lieutenant Fuller was transferred to Camp Sevier. Shortly afterwards, however, he was ordered back to Jacksonville and there received his commission.

Sept. 18 1918

Sergt. William Malone Has Been in Canada for Nearly a Year.

Refused for Overseas Duty Because of Old Wounds, Is Given Discharge.

William Malone of 244 Tinkham avenue, a veteran of the Boer war, a member of the British forces on the Indian frontier, and the possessor of an army medal from the Canadian war office, signifying an honorable discharge from the present war, arrived home yesterday following more than a year's absence.

Through injuries received in the South African war, Malone has failed thus far to see active service in the world's war, though he has several times attempted to enter the combatant forces. At the outset of the struggle, Malone became a member of the Rhode Island militia and was for a brief period with the famous Rainbow division. His injuries sustained in the Boer war caused his refusal for overseas service in the American army.

Malone was yet determined to do his mite, and on November 1, 1917, joined the Canadian signal corps. Again he met with failure when he was refused an opportunity of sailing for France—his wounds causing his discharge. His knowledge of telegraphy earned Malone a non-combatant position with the Canadian forces as an instructor of drafted men.

But he was far from content holding down a "plum" while others were doing the real fighting. When the Canadian army for service in Siberia was under formation at Ottawa, Malone again sought enlistment and was turned down.

With high hopes of becoming a member of Uncle Sam's new army of 18-45, Malone received his discharge from the Canadian forces and returned to the United States.

Malone is the owner of three medals. For service in the South African war, he earned the queen's medal which can be seen pinned to his breast from the above photograph. The last one is the army medal from the Canadian army.

Just now Sergeant Gilligan is making his home in New Bedford, having been assigned to assist the local Liberty loan committee during the present campaign. He is one of 250 wounded marines sent back to America last month and who were placed at the disposal of the national Liberty loan committee. was educated in the schools of Fairhaven, and during his second year in High school, he left school to take the position of oiler on the dredger Navesink. He enlisted in April, 1917, at the age of 18 years. He first entered the cavalry, at Fort Slocum, being sent from there to Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont, where his command was changed over to field artillery. He was promoted to a sergeantcy previous to going overseas, and arrived on the other side about the first of July.

Sergeant Cook is survived by his father and mother; a brother John, who is in the United States army, and is at present in hospital at New York, recovering from an attack of influenza; a brother, George J. PROPERTY FADES INTO HISTORY

Sept 1 - 1918

Estate of Heirs of Sylvia Ann Howland Lessened the Past Week.

Land and Building at 9-13 Water Street Once Business Centre.

Gradually the property once held by the Sylvia Ann Howland and Hetty Green estates is fading into history. The past week the property at 9 to 13 North Water street was sold by Haskins & Gibson for Edward H. S. Green, Henry B. Day and Oliver Prescott, trustees under the will of Sylvia Ann Howland, to Morris and Harris Horvitz of the Union Paper & Supply company. Only one piece of property of the original estate now exists and that is the building at the northeast corner of Union and Bethel streets, at the foot of what is known as Johnny Cake Hill, and which is said to be the oldest house in New Bedford. The holdings in this city 15 years ago amounted in value to $200,000 or more.

The site just sold contains 12 rods of land. It was bought in 1835 by Miss Sylvia Ann Howland and it is remarkable that there has been no change in the deeds since that time. The sale was recorded in the Bristol county northern district at Taunton and was copied by the local registry when it became established. Miss Howland paid $5125 for the property. At that time the business centre was located in that vicinity. On Water street were the banks, insurance offices and lawyers while the retail stores were located on Union street. The building just sold was used as a tailoring establishment. Forty years ago it was taken over by F. T. Akin to be used as a paint shop.

The money received in this week's transaction is to be distributed among the heirs of Miss Howland.

HOUGHTON IS LISTED MISSING

New Bedford Boy Was in Action on French Battlefront.

Enlisted in the Army Last July ---Well Known in the North End.

Sept 1918

Charles Houghton of 1804 Purchase street has been reported missing in action, the war department notifying his mother, Mrs. Sarah Houghton, here yesterday. Houghton enlisted in the army July 17, 1917, joining the colors in Detroit where he was employed as an automobile mechanic. He was first sent to camp to Columbus, Ohio, then to Gettysburg, then to Camp Green, N.

Charles Houghton.

C., and finally to Camp Mills, N. Y. Then he went overseas. He is well known here in athletic circles at the north end of the city.

Houghton is 19 years of age and was born in Fall River. He came here at the age of four years and attended the public schools. He was a member of Co. E, 58th Infantry, when he last wrote, and that letter was so cut up by the censor that there was little left except the information that he was well.

He has two brothers, Walter and James; two sisters, Mrs. Mabel Rivard and Doris N. Houghton of this city, and a third sister, Mrs. Emma Beaumont of Detroit.

TO BUILD UP CADETS AROUND DISCIPLINE

Sept 8 1918

Mr. Williams, New Instructor, Will Make That Central Feature In Instruction —Hopes to Increase Enthusiasm In Military Drill.

To build up the spirit of discipline and the qualities that discipline enforced inculcates in young men and to relegate the social features to a subordinate place will be the aim of Thomas W. Williams, who has been engaged as instructor of the High school cadets. This covers quite generally the plans of Mr. Williams in assuming the responsibility as instructor, but since Mr. Williams comes to the work without any previous acquaintance as to just what material he will find for development, details of his plan will more or less depend on circumstances as they develop. Mr. Williams brings to his work the necessary qualifications of enthusiasm, knowledge of military drill and faith that membership in the cadets means more than routine drill and the social features that enter into cadet membership. As the commander of a state guard company Mr. Williams has had the opportunity to keep himself abreast of the times with every change in military drill regulations, and an active company commander learns things that are not even down in the drill regulations.

Ensign Eckersall had been in the regular navy for four years and had the rating of a coxswain. When war broke out his enlistment had just about run out. He joined the merchant marine and went to navigation school where he attained high standing. But the merchant marine did not provide excitement enough for him and enlisting in the naval reserve auxiliary he finally received his commission and is now on the Luckenbach. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eckersall of 163 Jenney street.

PROVIDING HELP FOR UNCLE SAM

Sept-1 ——— 1918

U. S. Employment Office Opened Here Has Lots of Business.

Average of 25 Applications a Day and Work Has Just Started.

Helping to find New Bedford's proportionate quota of the 30,150 unskilled laborers who will be required for Massachusetts war industries before the last of September—that is part of the job assigned to J. Henry Herring, examiner in charge of the United States employment service office, recently opened at 72 William street, this city.

While the work here is not yet entirely under way, an average of 25 applications for jobs are received daily, and about twenty of the applicants are placed. So far the demands for jobs have greatly out-numbered the calls for help from local concerns, but the ratio is expected to change as soon as the service is thoroughly systematized.

At the present time the officials of plants employing more than 100 hands are supposed to do no scouting for help on their own initiative. If a man appears at their factory door, clamoring for work, he can be hired, but the industries are not supposed to advertise for help or send out employment agents. They are supposed to send a requisition to the United States employment office and workers will be assigned to their plants if they are available.

Don't Know About Law.

Many employers of labor are still unfamiliar with the law but arrangements are being made to bring it to their attention. It is the aim of the service to adjust labor conditions in such a way as to cause the least possible disturbance of industries but at the same time to insure plenty of workers for essential war industries.

Persons who are out of employment are urged to register immediately at the William street office and industrial concerns are invited to make use of the service to the fullest extent.

The office in this city has charge of a district which includes all of New Bedford, Dartmouth, Acushnet, and Fairhaven. Mr. Herring is assisted at his office by Arthur N. Harriman, president of the Central Labor union, and Miss Stella Vera. The members of the Public Service Reserve are supposed to co-operate with the employment bureau and are doing what they can to make the service effective. Herbert Week is directing the work in Dartmouth, Charles A. Drew in Fairhaven, and Benjamin F. Howe in Acushnet. Thomas Hersom, Jr., the New Bedford member of the Public Service Reserve is also lending his assistance.

Wheldon Couett in a letter to his aunt. The letter follows:

At the Front, Aug. 7, 1918.

Dear Aunt Nellie:

I intended to write you before but have been so busy trying to make good that I just couldn't find time, but nevertheless my thoughts are always of home ever since my arrival. Now don't misunderstand me, I am not homesick or sad, but am in the best of spirits. But we are bound to think of our relatives and friends for whom we are giving up our former pleasures, and have made up my mind to stay here until the autocratic rule of the kaiser is broken and democracy established. I am proud that I am old enough to get into the world's war which will decide the testing of several months.

ACROSS OCEAN IN A SUBMARINE

Jan 7 1919

Arthur H. Wilcox of This City in First Underwater Boat to Go Over.

A Winter Trip to the Azores and Patrolling About Western Islands.

A New Bedford man, Arthur H. Wilcox, a chief gunner's mate in Uncle Sam's navy, was a member of the crew of a United States submarine that has recently returned from foreign duty. Incidentally, Mr. Wilcox enjoys what distinction goes with the fact that he was in a submarine included in a fleet of eight of the United States underwater boats that first crossed the ocean under their own power. Mr. Wilcox is a New Bedford boy, the son of the late Henry Wilcox, and his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Wilcox, makes her home at 195 Shawmut avenue. A half brother is Seth A. Wilcox of the police department. Young Wilcox enlisted in the navy seven and a half years ago and is now serving his second enlistment, with six months more to serve.

LE BLANC WAS KILLED IN ACTION

Dec. 20 1918

New Bedford Boy Met Death in France on Oct. 20.

Was But 17 Years Old When He Enlisted Here in 1917.

Word was received from the war department yesterday afternoon that Camille LeBlanc, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel LeBlanc of 194 Dean street, was killed in action in France October 20. He enlisted in New Bedford at the recruiting office here in November, 1917, being 17 years old at the time, and after training in various camps in this country, sailed for France in March with company E of the Fourth infantry. He had been in many battles and had written home enthusiastically of army life. Before enlisting he was employed at Bonneau's grocery store at the corner of Nye and North Front streets.

Besides his parents, he is survived by four brothers: Arthur, Orelle, William and Edward, the latter having just been discharged from the army after six month's service overseas.

LIEUT. MAGNANT ARRIVES HOME

Dec 20 1918

Former Member of Battery D Reached New Bedford This Morning.

Was Twice Gassed at Chateau Thierry and Saw Action on Five Fronts.

Lieutenant Fred Magnant of 104 Tallman street, who left this city as a private with Battery D and won his officers' bars at an overseas training camp, returned home this morning, following a 14 months' absence. Lieutenant Magnant arrived in New York harbor Saturday night aboard the Manchuria.

He was commissioned a few days before the signing of the armistice at the summer artillery school in France. Lieutenant Magnant joined the command on its organization here and accompanied it to Boxford, Hoboken, and eventually overseas. He remained with the battery until early August and was then selected to enter a training school. At Chateau Thierry, Magnant was twice gassed, but to use his own words, he is today feeling fine, no ill-effects resulting from the poison.

DIED IN FRANCE

Corp. E. C. Petitpas Victim of Pneumonia.

Dec 12 1918

A telegram was received from the war department this morning informing Camille Petitpas of 95 Hathaway avenue that his son, Corporal Edward C. Petitpas, had died in France of pneumonia, October 8. The young man was one of five north end French boys who enlisted shortly after the United States declared war on Germany and he left New Bedford in May, 1917, going overseas in August of that year with an engineer corps. For more than a year he was on active duty at the front and during all that time had escaped injury. He is 28 years of age and was one of a family of two boys and five girls. Corporal Petitpas was a carpenter by trade and had worked for several concerns before enlisting. Of the five young French fellows who went away together, all of them chums, one, Clifford Cormier, has been killed, Petitpas has died and Adelard Leger was accidentally wounded. The other two are at present in France and so far as known are well.

two months had received three promotions. A few days prior to the signing of the armistice he was officially informed by his commanding officer that he had been awarded a commission in the United States army and was to be a second lieutenant. Before he could be presented with the document which would privilege him to wear shoulder straps, however, he died.

He was a prominent member of the Y. M. C. T. A.'s and general regret over his death was heard throughout th south end of the city where he was a most popular member of the younger element. McMahon was employed as a railway mail clerk on the fast passenger run from Boston to Rutland, Vt. He will be buried tomorrow with full military honors from his late residence, 58 Fair street, with a high mass of requiem for the repose of his soul to be sung at 9 o'clock in St. James' Catholic church.

telegram bearing the cheerful tidings was from the former, announcing he had landed safely Tuesday night in New York upon the Kroonland.

The sorrowful tidings, though unofficial, bore the news that Camille LeBlanc was killed in action. To date, Mr. LeBlanc has received no confirmation of the report, and the news was learned through a letter received here from a member of LeBlanc's company. The father has not heard from his son for the past four months and is thus inclined to place credence in the report.

Camille LeBlanc, but 17 years old, enlisted last year at Fort Slocum and was transferred to Kelley Field in the spring. Prior to enlistment, he was employed here as a grocery clerk.

Edward LeBlanc, a member of an aero squadron, was bound overseas when the armistice was signed, and has failed to see active service. He is a member of the 130th aerial service squadron.

GENERAL SENDS HIS SYMPATHY

Jan 8 1919

Parents of John Medeiros Receive Letter from Division Commander.

New Bedford Boy Lost His Life While Fighting in France.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Medeiros are in receipt of a letter of sympathy from the major general of the 82nd division, of which their son John was a member before he paid the supreme sacrifice on the battlefields.

Medeiros left with a draft contingent March 27, 1918, for Camp Devens. He stayed there three weeks and then was transferred to Camp Upton, from which camp two days later he embarked for over there. Prior to his leaving for the army Medeiros was employed in a local mill.

John Medeiros.

The letter received by his parents is as follows:

"My Dear Sir:—You have already learned through the war department that your son, Private John P. Medeiros, a member of the division, was killed in action against the enemy. He was a good soldier; met his death bravely and died with his face to the foe which he helped overcome. Your sorrow will be lightened by the knowledge that his comrades laid him away in the sacred soil he died to free; that the chaplain gave him proper burial and carefully marked his grave. We share with you the sorrow of his loss, yet rejoice in the hope of world freedom brought nearer by his sacrifice. Our country is richer because of his life. We shall always treasure his memory and be glad that our division was honored by his heroism. Trusting that our Heavenly Father may comfort you in your sorrow and that his heritage may be an inspiration to his family and friends, I am,

CORPORAL HERMAN SHAPIRO AND PHOTOGRAPHS OF TROPHIES.

The Boche aeroplane in the picture looks a whole lot better than it would if it was soaring through the sky all ready to rain death-dealing bombs on Red Cross hospitals and day nurseries. The photograph was one of several sent by Corporal Herman Shapiro of Company C, Second Ammunition Train, to his parents in this city. Another of the cuts shows the type of bombs which the machine carried, but it will carry no more of that kind, because it was captured by the American forces before the picture was taken.

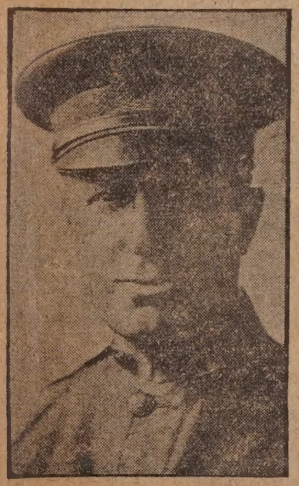
Oct 20 1918

First New Bedford Physician to Obtain Majority Rank in the Army---Went Overseas as a Captain.

Dr. Dennis J. Lowney of this city has been commissioned a major in the medical corps of the army. A cablegram just received from France announces his promotion. Dr. Lowney is the first New Bedford physican to obtain this rank.



Major Dennis J. Lowney.

Major Lowney is now at Chatau Zerous, in France. It was in October, 1917, that the doctor received his commission as a first lieutenant in the medical reserve corps and reported for duty at Camp Custer. In June, this year, he was promoted to the rank of captain in the medical corps and attached to the 57th engineers, and it was as a captain that the doctor went to France. He has risen from a lieutenancy to a majority in just one year.

A brother, Timothy E. Lowney, is now a captain in the quartermaster corps, in France.

Dec 8 - 1918

Private Henry Onley Discovers New Dance Steps from Personal Observation and Contact.

When Private Henry P. Onley comes home he will introduce two new dances, entitled "Trench Hop" and "Ducking the Shell."

He writes the following letter to his sister:

My Dear Sister: Hello people of America! I hope these lines will find you as well as they leave me. I have received your letters and the clippings from the New Bedford papers.

I think that we can tell you as interesting tales as did Sergeant Johnson on his return. The country is so beautiful. We have had no rain or hail, but oh the fogs. When the sun does shine everything is golden yellow.

We see the French kids going to school and makes me want to come home.

When I come back to the U. S. A. I shall introduce two new dances entitled "Trench Hop" and "Ducking the Shell."

God is still with us and protecting us. Thus far we are in the best of health, and better still, we have the Fritzes, big and little, on the run. We are looking forward to the day when the good news comes to return to America and you all. We have splendid officers and have not lost a man.

The magazines you sent were fine, and we are always eager to get something to read.

Give my regards to all our friends and lots of love to you. I have gained five pounds.

Your brother, Henry.

indicating anything serious, for he had a letter from his brother under date of November 7th, in which Corporal Beaulieu wrote that he had been gassed three times and was in a base hospital recovering from the effects of the gassing. He stated that he was pretty nearly well again, and that he expected to leave the hospital within a few days and go to the front again.

Corporal Beaulieu is the son of Mrs. John Beaulieu, and a well known young man at the north end of the city where he was engaged in the grocery business, his store being conducted under the firm name of Fahey & Beaulieu. He was a prominent member of the Tremont Athletic club and in December 1914 was elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the late Douglas L. McGee. Under his guidance the club prospered.

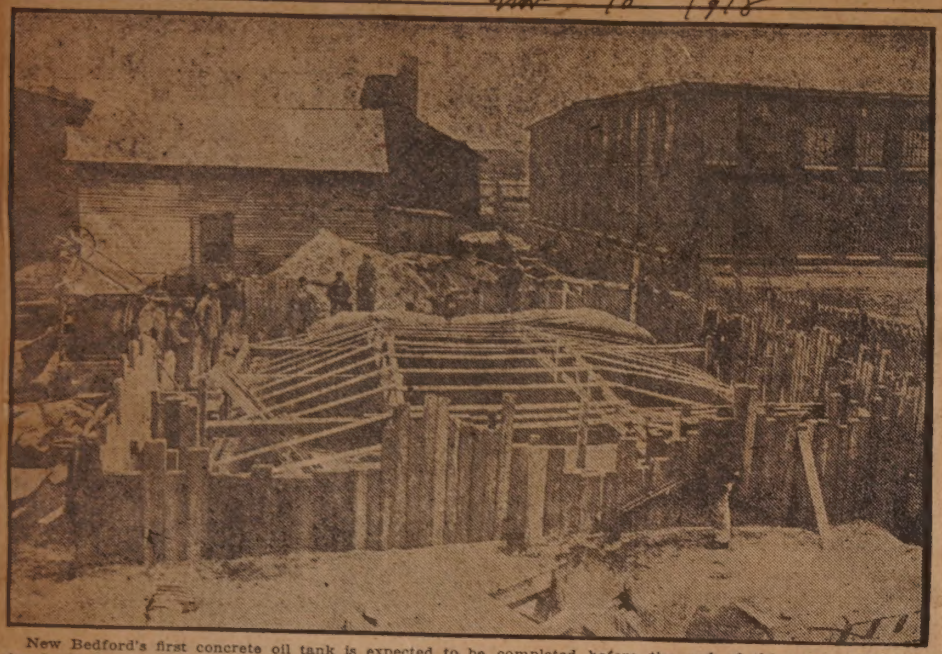
BIG CONCRETE OIL TANK FOR COPPER COMPANY

Nov 10 1918



New Bedford's first concrete oil tank is expected to be completed before the end of this week. It is now being built for the New Bedford Copper company by the J. W. Bishop company, and marks the adoption in this city of one of the latest improvements in the way of oil storage. The big container will be entirely under ground in the yard of the New Bedford Copper company plant, and will have a capacity of 35,000 gallons. It will be used to store a supply of fuel oil for use in the big furnaces of the factory.

Steel tanks for oil storage have occupied space in the yard to the exclusion of something else, and in addition, the corrosion of the metal, especially where the tanks are built on made land or near the water front, where excessive dampness or salt water was encountered, limited the life of the tank to a comparatively short period, and they often became leaky a very short time after they were in use.

The Bishop company is the sponsor in this section for the use of concrete for this purpose instead of steel. By a special method of treatment, the concrete is rendered absolutely impervious both to water from the outside and to oil from the inside. The concrete is heavily reinforced with steel rods imbedded in the mass and thus protected from rust or corrosion,, and thus strengthened the tank can be placed under ground and the space above used for storage of any kind of material or even built upon. It is also cheaper to put up a tank built of concrete than it is to put up one of equal size made out of steel.

The New Bedford Copper company tank measures 30 feet square and is seven and one-half feet deep, inside measurement. Its walls are twelve inches thick at the bottom, tapering to nine inches at the top, while the bottom is eight inches thick, with an additional four inches under the walls. The top is also eight inches thick, and there is a heavy pier fifteen inches square in the middle of the tank to give added strength to the roof. The tank will be filled to a depth of five and one-half feet, the additional two feet being left clear for a free circulation of air.

FIRST WOMAN ELECTED TO MUNICIPAL OFFICE HERE

Oct 29 1918

MISS RUTH G. HILTON.

Miss Ruth G. Hilton has achieved the distinction of being the first woman ever elected to municipal office in New Bedford. She was chosen Thursday night by the city council to succeed Charles P. Sawyer, as clerk of committees, a position entailing no little responsibility. Miss Hilton has been serving since August, 1917, as assistant to Mr. Sawyer. She entered the employ of the city in July, 1911, when she was appointed as a clerk in the city clerk's office. She was transferred at Mr. Sawyer's request last year.

For nearly a year, Miss Hilton, in addition to her regular duties, has been assisting Dr. Garry deN. Hough, chairman of the emergency relief commission, and since the epidemic started, she has been acting as Dr. Hough's secretary.

Strangely enough, in view of the honor that has come to her, Miss Hilton is not a suffragist. "I believe that equal suffrage will prevail eventually," she says, "but I do not approve of suffragette methods."

BARBER BACK FROM BATTERY D IN FRANCE
HAPPY REUNION OF NORTH END FAMILY

Jan 9. 1919

JAMES S. BARBER AND HIS THREE CHILDREN.

STUCK ON JOB UNTIL TOO SICK

Barber of Battery D Would Not Come Until He Was Ordered To.

Brings Thanks of Battery to Mrs. W. S. Anthony for Her Fine Work.

Another fighting son from "New Bedford's Fighting Own" Battery D, 102nd F. A., is home.

Tanned and hardened by 12 months' experiences in Flander's field, Bugler James S. Barber of 122 Hathaway street, arrived home this morning. A wife and the three "kiddies" with outstretched arms were ready to greet their returned daddy and a happy reunion followed.

"New Bedford may well be proud of its fighting sons who a year ago left the looms, untrained and crude soldiers, and are today among the finest warriors in the world," was the first message of cheer from the lips of Bugler Barber.

"Yes, New Bedford can well be proud of Battery D for as a unit it stands ready to go through hell and back again for the fifth time and even a sixth or until unconditional surrender is sounded," he continued.

Though Bugler Barber has been detached from the battery since early March he has at all times been within a few miles of his former pals. An attack of pneumonia suffered by Barber put him out of action and sent him into a rest camp. For four months or until the battery entered Chateau-Thierry, Barber was at three different hospitals at various periods.

When finally discharged Barber was in a weakened condition and was offered an opportunity to return to the states. That was not for him, however, and he asked to be transferred to the depot quartermaster's corps. His task was supplying the battery during the thick of the battle with supplies and ammunition. For three days and as many nights Barber did Herculean work in furnishing supplies, and as a reward received the following citation from his commander, Colonel A. E. Williams.

> Bugler James S. Barber has been at this depot for some time and has rendered excellent service in every position to which he has been assigned. He stuck to his work faithfully, even though not physically fit to be on duty at all. (Signed)
> Colonel A. E. Williams.

It was following his valuable aid in the quartermaster section that Barber suffered a relapse from his earlier illness that resulted in his discharge. He left France October 22 and arrived 11 days later at an Atlantic port. Following a month's furlough here, Bugler Barber is to return to the Lakewood, N. J., hospital.

Bugler Barber carries with him a message of thanks from the battery to Mrs. W. S. Anthony, mother of Battery D. "She is held in high esteem by all the boys," declared Barber, "and her good work and valuable aid is certainly appreciated."

GERMAN WAR STAMP PICKED UP ON BATTLEFIELD

Oct 27-1918

Germany, too, has a war stamp tax which performs a duty similar to our own War Savings stamps, according to mute evidence picked up on a battlefield in Flanders by Corporal Fred E. Beaumont who is with the Sixth engineers. He found them on a dead German over which he stumbled in crossing a field.

THE COMMANDER OF BATTERY D

Oct 20 1918

The above photograph shows, on the left, Lieutenant Cairns, commander of Battery D, and Lieutenant Lester W. Lewis of this city. Lieutenant Cairns fought the battery at Chateau-Thierry and the men who who have returned to this city are high in his praise. Lieutenant Lewis was with Lieutenant Cairns in this important battle and is the only officer now with the battery who left New Bedford. This snapshot, taken in France, is the first one of the battery commander to be published in this city.

HOPES TO RETURN

Private Gibson of 61st Sees End of War.

Oct 27 1918

J. H. Patenaude of this city has received the following letter from Private T. H. Gibson of the Headquarters Company, 61st Infantry, A. E. F. The letter is dated "Somewhere in France" and mentions a big offensive which the young man participated it.

"Dear Friend:

"Your welcome letter of Aug. 24th received today and believe me I was glad to receive such a fine and interesting letter. I am glad you received the souvenir I sent you. Your description of your good time surely made me homesick and I only wish I was with you on your vacation. You have doubtless read in the paper of the big offensive of Sept. 12th in which we participated. We gave them hell believe me.

Private Gill Writes to His Friends in This City.

Appreciation for tobacco received is contained in a letter to James Yates from Private F. T. O. Gill, who is tending wounded soldiers in the Canadian general hospital, Kirkdale, Liverpool. It has made him feel better, because tobacco is hard to get and also expensive across there. Gill works nights for a month and then days for three months and expects to remain at the work until the end of the war. The weather is "rotten," he writes, it having rained every day but two during the previous three weeks. His legs and back are giving him considerable trouble. He witnessed a game between Everton and Burnley recently, which Everton won in handy fashion.

DELGRADO FIRST NEGRO TO RETURN

Was Gassed and Wounded at Champagne Front on September 26.

Jan 19 1919

Returned Christmas Eve on Board LaFrance and Arrived Home Last Week.

"We was all there set for them Germans but they didn't show up"; thus spoke Jack Delgrado of 158 Cedar street, the first Negro hero to return with laurels won "over there;" of his experiences in the Valcour sector early in July, when the promised German offensive fizzled. For five days and as many nights, Delgrado and his mates waited in vain for the anticipated appearance of German forces.

Jack Delgrado.

Delgrado returned home last week, honorably discharged, wearing three gold chevrons, two signifying 12 months' service in Flanders, and the third designating wounds. It all happened at Champagne, September 26. There Delgrado was gassed, and for good measure ducked his right leg into the line of a rifle bullet.

Transfers to several base hospitals followed until he was finally assigned to return aboard the La France, which docked at New York harbor Christmas eve. Incidentally, Captain Clarence E. Burt and Lieutenant Byron McCullough were also passengers on the La France.

Delgrado, in company with two other colored lads, Clinton Thornton and Lewis Jones, enlisted through the Providence recruiting office, November 11, 1317, and was ordered to Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Mass. He was moved to Camp Greene, S. C., and later sailed from Newport News aboard the Susquehanna. He arrived at Brest, April 14, 1918.

Delgrado first saw service in the Argonne forest, June 5. From there he was moved to the Valcour sector, "but the Germans didn't show up." A transfer to the Verdun and Champagne front followed where he was finally disabled "over the top" September 26.

He was a member of Co. M, 3 M G. B., 372nd Infantry.

J. M. Savage.

Ja[illegible] M. Savage, for about 20 years a storekeeper on Purchase street near Wamsutta, and formerly a prominent member of the Calidonians, died yesterday at his home, 1720 Purchase street, at the age of 76 years. Mr. Savage was well known throughout the city because of his great interest in politics, although he did not hold office, and made it one of his hobbies to take active part in campaigns.

Mr. Savage was born in Ireland and came to New Bedford 36 years ago with his family of wife and children. After establishing his home here, he was employed as an engineer on steamships plying between America and Scotland. Leaving this line of trade, he took up storekeeping in this city, and retired from active life about four years ago. He has been ill about two months.

He leaves a wife, daughter, Mrs. Marian G. Henderson, and two sons, Abraham and John Savage.

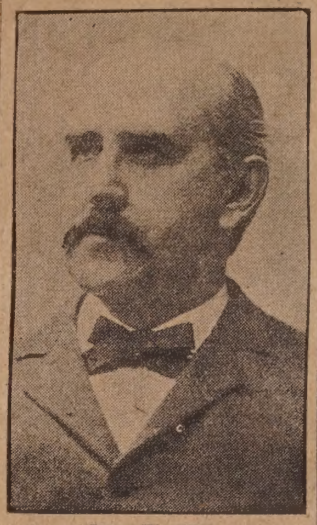
Death of Isaac W. Giles of Firm of Giles & Tobey, Machinists, Occurred at His Home Here Yesterday.

Isaac W. Giles died at his home, 82 Court street, yesterday, following an illness of some time. Mr. Giles was for about eight years a member of the firm of Giles & Tobey, machinists, at the corner of Water and Middle streets, having retired from active participation in business about three years ago.



Isaac W. Giles.

Mr. Giles was a toolmaker in Attleboro before he moved to this city. He was for a time connected with the J. C. Rhodes Co. in the manufacture of eyelets and also in the eyelet department of the Atlas Tack company. He was a veteran of the Civil war, and missed the battle of Gettysburg because of an injury to his ankle a few days before the battle. While he was unfit for active service, he did hospital service. He was a lieutenant in Co. K, 7th Massachusetts infantry, and his regiment marched north on the Emmettsburg pike for 36 hours preceding its arrival on the battlefield, the second day of the battle. He was wounded by a fragment of a shell that hit his ankle, and when he had reached the field hospital and had his wound bandaged, he was given a seat at the head of the operating table and kept busy by the surgeon administering ether and chloroform to the patients. He watched the events of the third day from Little Round Top.

Mr. Giles was a Mason and a member of Sutton Commandery, K. T. He is survived by a wife and an adopted daughter.

ed Friends' Academy, and later studied under the tutorship of the late John Boadle, who maintained a private school on Lincoln street. When he completed his education he entered his father's office, where he gained experience in the whaling business. He made one voyage in the bark Andrews, sailing for the late Jonathan Bourne. When he returned home he became a clerk in the office of a New York sugar firm, and when he came back to New Bedford he was employed in the Five Cents Savings Bank for three years. He went from this institution to the National Bank of Commerce, remaining in the employ of that bank until it surrendered its charter. Mr. Wood served the city as a member of the board of assessors in 1902-1905. He was elected city auditor in 1905, serving in that office while Thomas Thompson was mayor. Mr. Wood was a member of the New Bedford Yacht club and was treasurer for many years, owning for several years the fast sloop Thyre. He was a member of the Dartmouth club and of Acushnet Lodge, No. 41, I. O. O. F., and a member of the New Bedford Protecting society for many years.

He is survived by a widow, a daughter, Elizabeth, wife of Merton C. Fisher, and one son, Stanley W. Wood.

Leon F. Nolan.

Leon F. Nolan, in service overseas with the American expeditionary forces to the western front in France, has written to his mother, Mrs. Elodie Nolan, of 34 Bullard street, that he was both wounded by gunfire and gassed in action October 11. He is now confined to an evacuation hospital just behind the lines, suffering the effects of injuries to his right thigh and left hand.

His letter was received yesterday morning, and had been in transit for more than a month. He stated that aside from his wounds, he was in excellent health, and had nothing but praise for the manner in which he was treated by the army medical corps and by the Red Cross.

BATTERY D HAS LOST ANOTHER

Nov 2d 1918

George Higginson Died From Wounds Received in Action Oct. 8.

Was Loomfixer at South End Mill---Survived by Two Children.

News of another death in Battery D reached here last evening, contained in a telegram from the war department to the effect that George Higginson of 162 Thompson street had died in France October 18 from wounds received in action. The telegram came to his sister, Mrs. John Forrest, of 162 Thompson street, with whom Private Higginson had made his home since the death of his wife several years ago.

Mr. Higginson was 39 years old this month, and was one of the older members of the battery. He joined at the time the organization was first formed here, went to Boxford and then overseas with it, having participated in about every action in which Battery D had been engaged. Just a few days ago his sister received a letter from him dated October 3, in which he said he was well and in fine spirits, and looking forward to the end of the war and his return to New Bedford. Before enlisting in the battery he was employed as a loomfixer at the Gosnold mill. He was prominent in various activities at the south end of the city, and was a member of the St. James Holy Name society.

Mr. Higginson is survived by two children, Edmund, 17, and Alice, 14, both of whom make their home with their aunt, Mrs. Forrest. In addition to the latter sister, the deceased is survived by two other sisters, Mrs. James Yates of 87 Potomska street, and Mrs. Isaac Wilkinson of 162 Thompson street. Mrs. Wilkinson's husband is now overseas with the MacLean Kilties.

BILL ROOS HOME WITH WAR CROSS

June 15, 1919.

Won Croix de Guerre for Evacuation of a First Aid Post---Served in Ambulance Unit.

Private William Roos, son of Adolph Roos, of 119 Myrtle street, has arrived home after 18 months' service in the United States army ambulance service 544, assigned to the French army. On his breast he wears the Croix de Guerre for the part he took in the evacuation of a first aid post and on his left shoulder he wears the "Cock of Verdun."

The citation, signed by Petain, is as follows:

"On the 14th of October, 1918, he took part in the evacuation of the first aid post of 7th Colonial infantry under violent bombardment launched by the enemy especially upon the first aid post, causing the post to be removed. He further worked diligently relieving his tired comrades."

This action came in the Aisne-Oise offensive between the Suippe and Aisne rivers. At a point 10 kilometers southwest of Rethel at 11 o'clock at night, Roos was asked by the French officers to run up to the front trenches in his machine to carry back the wounded. The French stretcher bearer had become very tired in their bearers had become very tired in their Roos and was killed while helping to put a wounded soldier into the machine. Roos worked all night carrying back wounded men, and his reward came in the croix de guerre and citation.

Roos and Edward T. Whitney, who arrived home several weeks ago, were the only New Bedford lads in this branch of the service.

Upon completing two years at Harvard, Roos enlisted on June 9, 1917, and after spending six months in the service here, went overseas and became assigned to the French army. He took part in four major operations, the Aisne defensive of May 27, the Champagne defensive of June 9, the Champagne-Marne offensive of July 14, and the Aisne-Oise offensive of October 5, all in 1918.

After the armistice was signed, he moved out of the Champagne sector, through Lorraine until his outfit hit the line at Spire. He was in the French army of occupation.

LOSES HIS LIFE NEAR VERDUN

11/3 1918

Anthony Milette of This City Cited in Letter from Lieutenant.

Father Receives Fitting Tribute from Lieut. A. J. Lacouture.

No better tribute could have been given a soldier in the recent operations of the United States army in the Verdun sector, who died in defense of freedom, than has been given to Anthony Milette of this city by his lieutenant, A. J. Lacouture. The following letter was written by Lieutenant Lacouture to Augustine Milette of 10 Austin street, this city, father of Milette, who was killed in action:

Anthony Milette.

10th Machine Gun Battalion, American Expeditionary Force.
October 8, 1918.

Augustine Milette, 10 Austin street:

My Dear Mr. Milette: This battalion has been engaged during the recent successful operations of our army northwest of Verdun. There were bound to be cosualties. We all knew that before we came to France. We were all willing to give our best.

Your son was one that was called for the supreme sacrifice.

You have every reason to be proud of him. He was a faithful soldier and at all times, in training and on the battlefield, conducted himself according to the highest ideals of the American army.

He would not want us grieve for him. We have lost a faithful soldier and a loyalfriend, you have lost your son. His officers and comrades send you their deepest sympathy.

CAPT. WM. POOLE IS SPRY AT 74

apr 1 — 1919

Conducts Small Farm at North Dartmouth—Retired from Sea in 1896 After 32 Years of Whaling.

One would scarcely know, to look at Captain William H. Poole, as he performs the tasks about his small farm in North Dartmouth, just over the line, that he is today observing his 74th birthday anniversary.

Tall and straight, with a step almost as spry as when in May, 1864, he sailed on the bark Morning Star for Hudson Bay, is Captain Poole. The years have been good to him. He has spent the winter cutting fire wood, an occupation which Captain Poole finds not at all strenuous.

"FIGHT TO FINISH."

"No Peace Now," Says Wagoner Anthony Marcotte.

Wagoner Anthony Marcotte of Battery D, 55th Coast Artillery, A. E. F., wrote the following letter to a friend in this city telling of some of his experiences since going overseas and taking part in the big pushes.

Dear Friend: I take great pleasure in writing you a few lines to let you know that I am feeling well and everything is going fine over here. I just received 21 letters and that was because we have been moving from one front to another. Today I wrote 16 letters. We are cleaning up the Germans over here and you can certainly believe that we gave them hell in this big drive.

Joe Marcotte.

They are asking for peace but we want no peace. This is a fight to the finish. I have seen prisoners of about 16 and 18 years of age and the Germans must be pretty hard up if they are using them so early. The French are doing fine work over here. Give my regards to all the old boys we used to know and extend my hopes for a meeting with them to all. Sincerely yours,

Wagoner Anthony Marcotte,
Bat. D, 55th C. A. C., A. E. F.

These two heroes of France have been given deferred classification by the draft officials of Division 4. Though both men have dependents, they have waived these rights in order to return to France as "doughboys." The authorities at the mill where they are employed, however, sought deferred classification for these men, valuing them as skilled employes.

DR. BABCOCK DIES IN BOSTON HOSPITAL

May 26, 1919

FAILS TO RECOVER CONSCIOUSNESS AFTER BEING STRICKEN WITH SHOCK.

Had Practiced His Profession in This City for 40 Years—Popular as a Physician and Citizen and Established Wide Clientele.

Dr. Daniel A. Babcock passed away at the Homeopathic hospital, Boston, shortly after midnight Saturday night, as the result of an apoplectic shock with which he was stricken when in Boston last Tuesday. He shortly became unconscious and died without regaining consciousness.

Dr. Babcock was born in Providence, July 10, 1852, the son of Cyril and Lydia (Clark) Babcock, and he attended the public schools of Providence, being a classmate of John W. Cummings in the Providence High school. He later took up the study of medicine at the New York College of Medicine and studied further under his uncle, Dr. Henry Clark of New Bedford, taking up his uncle's practice while the latter made an extended visit to Europe.

He afterwards practiced for a time in Taunton and from the latter city he came to this city in 1879. On coming to this city Dr. Babcock practiced with another of his uncles, Dr. J. L. Clark, to whose practice he eventually succeeded. He was popular both as a physician and a private citizen, and he established a wide clientele. He continued active practice up to the day of his death, and was the oldest practicing physician in the city.

Dr. Babcock was married on April 30, 1887, to Miss Minnie, daughter of Lucy and the late Daniel Chace. He survived his wife, by a number of years, and of an immediate family he leaves but two daughters, Mrs. Charles P. Deems of Ross, Cal., and Miss Margaret L. Babcock, and two grandchildren. Mrs. Deems arrived in Fall River only a few days ago, and Dr. Babcock then saw his grandchildren for the first time. He was a charter member of the Quequechan Club.

The funeral services will be held at his late home, 254 Rock street, at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon.

New Flag Flies Over White Home for Nurses at St. Luke's Today—Graduates Are in the Service Here and Overseas.

Snapping in the breeze outside the White Home for Nurses at St. Luke's hospital today flies the new honor flag of the institution, its stars mutely announcing that 30 of the nurses are in the service of their country either here or overseas.

The flag is not like the flags displayed for the men who are serving their nation, but it the real service flag of the Red Cross. Its white field forms a most attractive background for the large red cross, the latter the symbol of sacrifice and love, and encircling the red cross are thirty blue stars. The flag is unique in that it is the official service flag for nurses and doctors in the service of the country and that its colors are the colors of the national emblem.

Each star on the flag represents one of the following nurses, serving in France.

enlisted last March. Before he went into the army he was employed in the Beacon mill.

His letter, written on October 4 in the hospital, was as follows:

"Just a few lines to let you know that I am getting along well and expect to join my battalion soon. I am writing these few lines in bed in the hospital. I got blown up by a big shell and I could not speak for five days but I am doing fine now. I was shell-shocked and also got a little gas and, believe me, it's awful, and I had a narrow escape. I was lying in a shell hole with 'Big Jack' Hogarth and a shell burst near us and blew half of Big Jack's arm off and it never touched me. Believe me, it made me move. The last I saw of Big Jack they were fixing his arm and it was not until later in the day that I got blown up. The doctors and sisters are very good to us here. I lost everything I had on the battlefield. The fight I was in was the Cambrai fight. I guess you have seen something in the papers about it."

HESKETH MEETS DEATH IN FRANCE

Oct 20 1918

South End Man Killed in Action on September 27th.

Was Treasurer of Cove Albion Club---Overseas But Three Months.

Word was received here yesterday of the death of Private Silas Hesketh, of 60 County street, who was killed in action September 27. The ill tidings were contained in a telegram received by his widow, Mrs. Eliza Hesketh, from the director of records at Ottawa. He was 27 years old.

Silas Hesketh.

Hesketh was overseas but three months. He enlisted here in March. Hesketh was a native of Ashton-Under-Lyne, England, and had resided in New Bedford for five years. While here he served as treasurer of the Cove Albion S. & A. C., and was an employe of the Morse Twist Drill.

In addition to a widow, two children, James and Edith, age six and three years respectively, survive.

Veteran of Civil War Composes Verses to Welcome Soldiers Home

May 22nd 1919

Samuel Briden.

[The author of these verses is Samuel Briden of 64 Bedford street, 80 years of age, a member of Post 1, G. A. R., and a soldier in the First Rhode Island cavalry during the Civil war.]

From a far distant trench and from white tented plain
We gladly come to New Bedford again.
Some are stained as heroes in battle's red gore,
But they have all done their duty and none can do more.

Then homeward we come, proudly homeward we come,
And sweet is the welcome of kind friends at home,
How warmly love's feeling in each heart will burn,
When friends fondly welcome the soldiers' return.

Then hurrah for awhile from the fort and the field,
We come for the comfort our firesides can yield,
And gladly forget our brief weary sojourn,
When friends fondly welcome the soldiers' return.

To fathers and mothers what joy it imparts
To meet their loved son they have mourned in their hearts,
And gladly forget their brief weary sojourn,
When friends fondly welcome the soldiers' return.

RECEPTION FOR MR. PARKER.

Closing Event in His Career With Trinitarian Church.

Jan 3d 1919

The final tribute of the church the retiring minister of the Trinitarian Congregational church took the form of a community-wide reception, in the Church Home parlors last evening, with the invitation extended to all who cared to come.

The splendid spirit of the church toward Rev. Fletcher Douglas Parker was shown in the beauty and attractiveness of the arrangements. The great Church Home parlors, absolutely fresh with the new paint that followed the building's use as an epidemic hospital, were beautiful in themselves, with their greenish walls and handsome pictures, and terra cotta rugs; and this usual beauty was augmented by bankings of palms behind the receiving line, in corners, and as screens for orchestra and entrance door; and instead of using overhead lights, the rooms were left dim through clouded electric lights in the baseboards.

Rev. Fletcher D. Parker.

MEMBER OF CREW OF NEW YORK

Dec 29 1918

Thomas C. Sisson Returns After 13 Months of Foreign Service.

One of Ship's Crew Which Escorted President Wilson Into Brest.

To stand attention when King George, the Prince of Wales, Admiral Sims, Admiral Rodman and Admiral Beatty inspected the great American battleships at Rosyth, Scotland, to be a member of the crew of one of the United States battleships which welcomed the George Washington which carried President Woodrow Wilson and his party to France by saluting the transport with 21 gun volleys and line up as the ship which carried President Wilson into Brest was the experience of Seaman Thomas C. Sisson of 148 Arnold street, stationed on the U. S. S. New York.

Seaman Sisson returned to New Bedford Friday after having been with the U. S. fleet in foreign waters for 13 months. He enlisted in April, 1917, for four years and was sent with the fleet to participate in battles with the German fleet, should the occasion arise.

Five battleships, the New York, Texas, Wyoming, Florida and Arkansas with the British fleet acted as convoys along the coast of Scotland and stood by waiting for the German fleet to start something.

"The only time that the German battleships showed themselves," said Mr. Sisson, "was the day that they passed through a long line of Allied warships after surrendering to the Allies. The way they passed through that line was just like bringing lambs to slaughter. The German fleet is now interned near the Orkney islands in Scotland."

Some of the sailors of the American warships had a chance to go on board the German ships and had many novel experiences in their visits to London, Portland and Brest.

"The American battleships were given a wonderful welcome when they sailed into New York harbor, and believe me, all we fellows were glad to get back after being away from home for over a year. The shores were black with people who cheered us, bands played and the boats in the harbor were decked in holiday attire with flags of the Allied nations. We paraded through the streets of New York and were elated over the spirit of patriotism which the people displayed."

Mr. Sisson will report back to the U. S. S. New York on Jan. 11, and will finish his term of enlistment. He was employed by The Mercury for over four years before enlisting.

WITNESSED HUN SURRENDER

Dec 27 1918

C. C. Porte Was a Member of the Crew of the U. S. S. Wyoming of the American High Seas Fleet.

C. C. Porte of 295 Pleasant street was one of the local boys who had the privilege of witnessing the surrender of the German grand fleet and who helped for one year to down the Hun submarines. He was attached to the U. S. S. Wyoming, one of the newest and biggest ships afloat in the American navy. The fleet of American boats under Admiral Sims arrived off Scapa Flow in the northern part of Scotland on December 7th, 1917, and while on the way across encountered a big storm which made headway an impossibility. The engines of the ship were turning over at the rate of 20 knots of speed but the big ship Wyoming was able to hold her own only, so great were the waves which she was heading into.

In Scapa Flow they coaled ship for three days and nights and met the British grand fleet a few days later. The American boats then engaged in convoy duty which was very hard on the American tars as instead of the usual routing of four hours on and eight hours off the sailors went for four hours on and four hours off. They were exceedingly lucky to get chow during that time as setting the table was almost impossible, so rough was the sea. The Wyoming has one submarine to her credit and while over there she comprised part of the famous Sixth Battle Squadron, composed of the ships Arkansas, Wyoming, Florida and Texas.

On the morning of November 11th, when the news of the signing of the armistice became known to the American and British sailors, the Firth of Forth where the fleet was anchored burst into a blaze of light as never since the war began. Songs were sung and dances, speeches and parades were the order of the day. The tars just cut loose with joy and had a wild celebration.

Later Porte witnessed the surrender of the German grand fleet from the deck of the Wyoming and was later reviewed by the president of the United States at Brest where that executive had only recently landed from the transport George Washington. Porte arrived home with the American high seas fleet and expects to resume his former position as brakeman on a fast passenger run on the New York Central line.

He wears the insignia of a third class electrician, which he earned while in foreign service, and is entitled to wear two gold service chevrons although only actually wearing one.

Nov 20 1918

Member of Battery D Was Hit in Action on September 2.

Was One of Original Members of the Command and Went to Boxford With It.

News of further action of Battery D was received in this city today when the name of Honore Michaud of 117 Bullard street, a member of "New Bedford's Fighting Own," appeared upon the official casualty list as "wounded, degree undetermined." He was wounded in action September 2.

Honore Michaud.

Michaud joined the battery at its organization here and accompanied it to Boxford and then overseas. No news has been received here from him since late in July when Battery D entered the rest camp following the furious fighting at the Marne. Prior to enlistment he was employed as a fixer at the Gosnold mill.

Another brother, Thomas, is also serving overseas with a contingent of New England "doughboys."

CHANGES IN CITY HALL SQUARE

SCENE ON CITY HALL SQUARE TODAY.

From a Photograph by a Standard Artist.

The above illustration, showing the Market street front of City Hall square, as it appears today and 26 years ago, will prove of value in years to come, and those who are looking for historical data of a local nature can find no better use for space in their scrap books than by cutting this illustration out and preserving it. The picture on the left shows the square as it appeared 26 years ago, when the Fourth Ward Market kept by the Wordell Brothers occupied the corner where is now located the brick structure in which E. C. Brownell opened the market which is now maintained by Frederick A. Shores. The older illustration is from a photograph by George F. Parlow, reduced by E. L. Tillinghast, Jr., who has kindly furnished the Standard with a copy. The other was photographed by the Standard artist.

When the square was photographed 26 years ago City hall was surrounded with cobble stones, and the elm trees surrounding the square were protected by slats of wood constructed in box form. There was none of the park effect which is seen today as one passes along Sixth street from William street. The comparison happens to be a happy one as both views were photographed at a season of the year when the trees were leafless.

and from which he failed to recover.

Mr. Westgate was born in New Bedford. For a number of years he has been a foreman at the Kelley fish establishment in Fairhaven. In addition, he was proprietor of a store at the corner of Washington and Rotch streets. His term of service at head of the fire department was the longest served by any one chief. He is survived by a wife, sons Edward C. and Nathaniel D. W. Westgate, and a daughter, Madge C. Westgate. Edward has recently returned from Italy and has been awarded the Italian war cross. The father was a member of George H. Taber lodge, A. F. and A. M., which will conduct the funeral services to be held Saturday at 2 o'clock.

Miss Greenwood was assistant in the north district office, at 1566 Acushnet avenue, and the families among whom she worked have become so attached to her that they regret to have her go.

Miss Mildred Carpenter, secretary of the Charity Organization, with whom Miss Greenwood has worked since the latter's graduation from the New Bedford High school in 1917, pays the young woman a high tribute when she says: "While we are very glad that Miss Greenwood has an opportunity to go, we are sorry to lose her, for she was a faithful and conscientious worker."

TEACHER MUST KNOW IMMIGRANT

Should Live His Life to Understand Him, Says Mary Herlihy 9/7-'19

Foreigner Needs First to Learn English and Arithmetic

That the only practical and successful method in Americanizing the immigrant, is that in which the teacher gets down to his level, lives the life he lives to discover his drawbacks, learn his peculiarities and see things, if possible, with his eyes, is the belief of Miss Mary E. Herlihy, teacher at the J. H. Clifford school, for 14 years in charge of ungraded pupils, mostly foreigners, and 15 years in evening school with the foreign adults, expressed in a thesis on Americanization, which has attracted considerable interest especially among students of the problem, because of its clear, concise statement of the situation and the best methods of meeting it.

The thesis reads:

"The most effective method of instruction for the newly arrived immigrant, is to teach him English and arithmetic; these two, he cannot do without.

"He attends an evening school, like all adults, but with an intensely practical aim in view—to meet his own daily needs. If he be a weaver in the mill, he is anxious to know the words that help him to talk about his work, to know how to pronounce correctly the names of the parts of the machine upon which he is engaged; he is eager for numbers that, he may count the things around him that are worth while. Untold pleasure it affords him to write his name, the number of his home, or style of the fabric he is weaving.

Miss Mary E. Herlihy.

Two interesting letters have been received from Myron C. Goddard of Fairhaven, who is a member of 221 M. P. corps and at present in charg of the telephone exchange in his vicinity at Chateausoux. The letters, in part, follow:

"Do you remember George Purrington, who was in my class in High school? He is stationed at Post Montierchaume, about six miles from here. He saw me on the street and recognized me. We had a good talk fest. I received a bundle of 32 papers. They were 'Standards.' I'm going to save them till Tuesday and give them to Purrington.

"It certainly seems good to get a tub bath agin. There is a bath joint about a hundred yards from here. They have deeper tubs than I have ever seen before. If you have the tub nearly full when you get in you have to hold your chin up to keep it dry. It costs two francs fifty centimes (50 cents) for a plain tub bath, small cake of soap and two towels (we call them that size in the states, small face towels)."

The other letter reads, in part:

"Tuesday I was with Purrington. In the evening French movies but an Italian film that I saw in the states when I was a senior at High school. Little did I think then I would see it again four years later in France as an American soldier.

"Wednesday I saw General Pershing as he walked through the station to board his special train. He inspected the Red Cross canteen before he went to his train and I had a good look at him both times. He is a much taller man than I had thought for. He is six feet and better. He passed my inspection.

"I have just come up from the American services today.

"That is the way it goes, day by day and week by week. Every time a week goes by I know my going home is a week nearer but that is not very encouraging when you have no knowledge of how many are left. I think October will see me in civilian clothes again."

Eagen Home After Absence of More Than Twelve Years

June 26 - 1919

Sergeant George Eagen.

After traveling entirely around the world, George Eagen has returned to his home in this city for the first time in more than 12 years. Eagen is first sergeant of Company D, sixth regiment, United States infantry, regulars, and has just completed 14 months' service on the western front in France. He first enlisted in 1901, but allowing for double time for foreign service, has 27 years of service to his credit, and in three more years will be granted a life pension of $80 a month.

In April, 1901, Eagen joined the second regiment cavalry, and was ordered to Cuba. Three years later he was transferred to the infantry, stationed in the Philippines, where he remained nine years. Soon after war was declared against the German empire he was ordered to France. He saw a great deal of hard fighting on the western front. At the end of his present furlough he will join his command at Fort Russell, Wyoming.

Eagen is spending his furlough with his brother, James Eagen of 909 County street.

New Bedford Boy Has Been Promoted To Boatswain's Mate

Feb 23 - 1919

Boatswain's Mate Maloney.

Lawrence F. Maloney, a south end boy who has been with the American fleet in the European war zone for over a year, as a member of the U. S. S. Napotin, has been promoted to boatswain's mate. Mr. Maloney was well known in athletics when here, and evidently he has lost none of his love for outdoor sports, for he sends on a large poster announcing that the football teams representing the U. S. S. Napotin and U. S. S. Yale were to meet at Southhampton, England, for a purse of $500, and tells how the crew of the Napotin are to wager over $500 on the result. At present the team of the Napotin are champions of the fleet, but the one game they played against Yale resulted in a tie score, the Yale players being the only team that has carried the ball over the Napotin line.

June - 1919

Louis Rousseau.

Among the New Bedford men who have recently returned from the service is Louis A. Rousseau of 12 Harmony street, who has received his discharge after serving overseas since June, 1917.

He was with S. S. U. 539 which was a Amherst college ambulance unit. His outfit served with several divisions of the French armies; part of the time with a division of Chasseurs Alpin or "Blue Devils." Since February, 1918 his unit was attached to the fifth French division Since 1917 he has served on almost every front and has been in some hard fighting. His outfit received two army citations from the French which entitles the members of S. S. U. 539 to wear the Croix de Guerre fourragere.

In all there are but four American units who are authorized to wear a French fourragere. The Lafayette Escadrille, S. S. U. 539 and S. S. U 625 wear the fourragere of the Croix de Guerre, but only one Yankee outfit wears the Medalille Militaire fourragere and that is S. S. U. 646.

Mr. Rousseau also wears on his shoulder the insignia of the American ambulance service, the white rooster of Verdun on a maroon background, being one of the very few men from New Bedford who saw service with an ambulance unit.

FATHER BOUCHER COMING HOME

2/6 1919

Chaplain Expects to Sail from France by Middle of the Month.

Letters Were Received Here by Friends Containing Information.

Letters received in this city yesterday contained the information that Lt. Osias Boucher, chaplain in the United States army, stationed at present in France with a regiment of the 26th division, hoped to sail for home about the middle of this month, and members of his parish hope to see him again early in March. Already there has been some talk of a reception in his honor but no plans have as yet been really formulated.

Chaplain Osias Boucher.

Father Boucher was the first priest from New Bedford to volunteer for war work, was one of the few who went across with the first contingent of troops as a K. of C. chaplain, was the first American priest to be decorated for bravery on the field of battle by a French commander, won a commission as a chaplain in the regular army and has made a truly wonderful record abroad. When the first raid of American troops was launched Fr. Boucher insisted on going over the top with the boys and he stayed with them in the very thick of battle, offering them encouragement during the terrible struggle, bringing physical and spiritual comfort to them as they were struck down.

LOCAL SOLDIER GETS PROMOTION

E. B. Tolman Raised to Rank of Captain, Is in Germany.

Jan 22 - 1919

"Things Promising for Early Trip Home," Writes to His Mother.

News of the promotion of E. B. Tolman to the rank of captain has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Tolman, of 170 Sycamore street.

Captain Tolman received his promotion 24 hours after the armistice was signed. He is now in Germany and says there is a possibility of being home before long. Captain Tolman has been in active service since August, 1917.

Captain E. B. Tolman.

The substance of his letter is as follows:

Confians, Germany
Dec. 30, 1918.

My Dear Mother: Christmas found me up here and very comfortably situated. We are located in what was, a short time ago, a German hospital, and everything is fine.

The company is all in one big building with electric lights, telephones and hardwood floors, and with baths throughout. It was a big surprise, I can assure you, to move into a place like this after living in dug outs and the like for some time.

Christmas passed very pleasantly, the major giving a dinner for the officers of the battalion, and a few invited guests. The party was a huge success.

Hereafter you may address me as Captain E. B. Tolman, the promotion arrived just 24 hours after the armistice was signed; and while we were at Bouillonville. While that was one mean time and place, I felt fully repaid for the experience.

Things look promising for an early trip home.

Your loving son,

E. B. Tolman.

FOUR GENERATIONS LIVE TOGETHER

8/24 1919

Left to right—Mrs. Onesiphore Bertrand, Raymond Remillard, Jr., Mrs. Frank Lambert and Mrs. Raymond Remillard.

Frank and Arselia Vien Lambert odf No. 80 Beetle street observed the 50th anniversary of their wedding Aug. 2. They were married at Grosvenordale, Ct., August 2, 1869. They have lived in New Bedford 26 years, and three generations of their descendants now make their home with the "old folks."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lambert were born in Canada, but came to this country and were married when they were very young. They have three children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild. The children are Joseph Lambert, Mrs. James A. Forand and Mrs. Onesiphore Bertrand. One of the daughters, Mrs. Bertrand, herself is a grandmother. Her daughter, Florida, married Raymond Remillard some years ago, and they have one child, an infant son, Raymond, Jr.

Mr. Lambert is apparently as young in spirit and as capable as many men several years his junior, and is steadily employed in the supply room at the Nashawena mill.

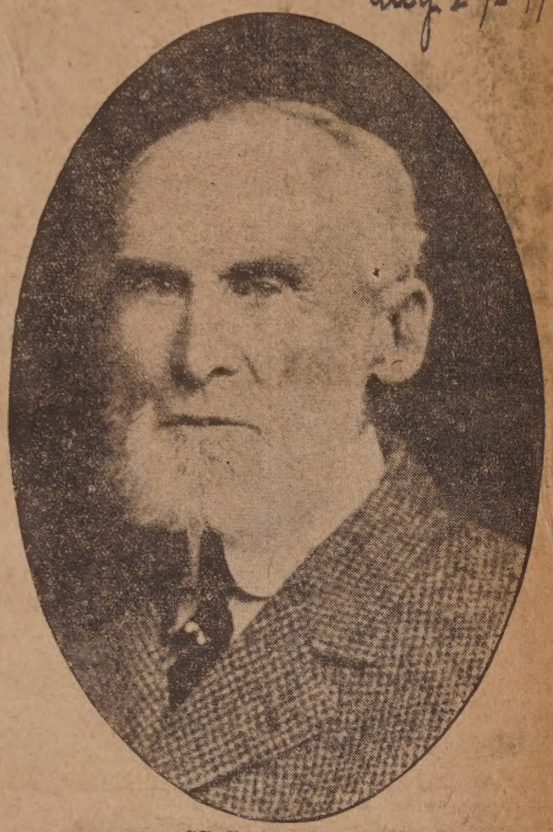
DR. E. R. SISSON DIED EARLY THIS MORNING

Would Have Been 91 Next Tuesday—Physician at Age of 26—Was Exper Yachtsman and Owned Prize Winning Craft.

aug 27- 1919



DR. E. R. SISSON.

Dr. Edward R. Sisson died at 4 o'clock this morning. Because of his advanced age, he would have been 91 if he had lived until Sept. 2, his death was not unexpected. He had been in feeble health for some time.

He was born in Westport, Sept. 2, 1828, the son of Daniel Sisson of that town and Charlotte Beal, of a Rhode Island family. The fact that at the age of 26 he was a practicing physician indicates the calibre of the man, for becoming a doctor was not so easy three-quarters of a century ago as it is today, when youth slides along in free secondary schools and finds at hand when ready for professional training convenient colleges and universities to carry them with the maximum of convenience and assistance to their desired goal. When Dr. Sisson began to look about for training in medicine, he had to find his chance to get it. Instead of a continuous term of years in one school, as is the possibility today, he is recorded to have taken "courses" here and there.

NEW BEDFORD PALS TOGETHER IN FRANCE

Feb 2-1919

SERGEANT ALFRED GRENIER AND SERGEANT ALBERT DUFRESNE.

Sergeant Alfred Grenier and Sergeant Albert Dufresne of the 14th Company, Third Air Service Mechanics Battalion, France, have written home telling of their adventures since leaving this country in the latter part of June, last year. Since landing at Brest they have been stationed at the largest aviation camps in France and have seen service as mechanics over there.

Grenier has been sick with scarlet fever following a visit to the front with his commanding officer and for time was in a serious condition in an army hospital behind the lines. He pulled through, however, and is now as well as ever. The two boys are now in Paris, where they are enjoying a well earned furlough.

Feb. 2-1919

WILFRED AND JOSEPH COTE.

Two brothers, Wilfred and Joseph Cote, the sons of Mrs. Athanas of 183 Whitman street, are overseas, although both brothers did their bit in different branches of service. Wilfred is now stationed at Pauillac, the naval aviation base. He sailed overseas in November.

Joseph A. Cote is with the engineers and sailed for France a month before the admistice was signed.

OBSERVED THEIR 59TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY AT THEIR HOME IN THIS CITY YESTERDAY

2/14/19

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD F. SMITH.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Smith celebrated the 59th anniversary of their marriage at their home, 7 Thomas street, yesterday. They were married February 13, 1860, the year before the Civil war started. Mr. Smith was born in Manchester, England, April 17, 1834, and started to learn the weavers' trade when he was 13. In 1856, he came to this country and for a while made his home at Woonsocket. In 1861, he enlisted in the army and fought in the Civil war. For a number of years he was employed as an overseer in the Wamsutta mills and he also worked for other textile concerns. He retired in 1912. Mr. Smith is a member of G. A. R. Post No. 1. The couple have four children, Mrs. Thomas F. Kavanagh, Mrs. William E. Grocock, Dr. James E. Smith and Charles E. Smith, and six grand-children: Miss Grace Kavanagh, the Misses Frances, Margaret, Eleanor and Ann Smith and Edward Smith.

NEW BEDFORD BOY IN STEVEDORE REGIMENT

Feb 23 1919

ALFRED S. SPOONER AND HIS FRIEND.

Alfred S. Spooner, formerly of this city but now in France with a stevedore regiment, in letters home states that he is getting along nicely and has been enjoying excellent health since landing over there. He and his friends in the army have not been particularly busy since the signing of the armistice and expect to be assigned for an early return to this country. The order marking them as due to return here has been expected for some time but for some reason has been withheld up to the present time. The Negro boys in France did splendid work according to Spooner and any of the Negroes in this country who did not get a chance to go across have every reason to feel proud of their brothers in arms on the other side.

can soil. At present he is at a hospital in New Jersey, awaiting his discharge papers.

Private Paquin is minus his first and second fingers on his right hand. He was wounded in the big drive of September 29. The fact that he is injured does not seem to bother him in the least and he is more wont to speak of the German that he got than his wounds. He is sure, he says, that he got one German but how many more he doesn't know.

Private Paquin enlisted in July at Camp Merritt and sailed shortly after. In the picture he is togged in his baseball outfit. The photo was taken while he was at Camp Merritt and a member of Co. E, 49th Infantry.

DAVIS DISCHARGED

Carpenter's Mate on Mt. Vernon Had Thrililng Voyage.

Joseph M. Davis.

Bracing up shores against the bulkheads of the U. S. S. Mt. Vernon to keep them from caving in after the vessel was torpedoed, was one of the jobs of Joseph M. Davis of 49 Stackhouse street, a carpenter's mate, third class, aboard that transport.

Davis has just been discharged and next week will return to his old job as a carpenter with Greene & Wood. He made seven complete trips with the Mt. Vernon, the one on which the boat was torpedoed being the most thrilling. This occurred September 5 at 8 in the morning. Davis had finished his "chow" and was walking up on deck when the ship gave a lurch and he was thrown against a bulkhead. The torpedo had hit midships on the starboard side, and 36 firemen were killed. The vessel was 250 miles out and was making 22 knots when struck. Turning about, she was able to make only 14 knots back into Brest, and during the voyage the carpenters, wet to the skin, worked heroically to brace up the bulkheads to keep the ship afloat.

Davis enlisted in the navy December 7, 1917, and was in the transport service eight months.

BRIGHTMAN HOME AGAIN.

Chief Boatswain's Mate at Newport for Fourteen Months.

After 14 months service at the Naval Torpedo station, Newport, Chief Boatswain Mate Kenneth H. Brightman has returned to his home at 86 Chancery street. Brightman enlisted in the United States navy before war was declared, and in the early fall was in charge of a picked armed guard of 108 blue jackets who kept Rose Island Naval Arsenal free from intruders. In the spring of 1918 he was transferred to the U. S. Torpedo testing ship No. 1, which tries out and tests all torpedoes before they are taken to the fleet.

During this part of his service he saw some exciting and interesting work with torpedoes and many times assisted in starting a twenty foot long torpedo out on a three mile practice run. Boatswain Mate Brightman states that if the navy ever needs him again he will be right on deck awaiting his chance for service.

Raymond Fiorelli.

Raymond Fiorelli, who was one of the first New Bedford Italians to answer America's call for volunteers, returned to his home, 149 Morgan street last night after more than a year's service in France. Fiorelli arrived at Hoboken early last week and later moved to Camp Devens. He served with the 307th infantry, which comprised a unit of the 77th division.

Although his O. D. "unie" carries no wound insignia, Fiorelli is not forlorn in admitting that he must have carried concealed a "rabbit's foot." Of the 312 men in his company but 32 survive. Fiorelli underwent the baptism of fire at the Argonne, followed by service in the Verdun sector.

New Bedford Man Home After Long Service in Army

Lieut. Jude O. Perry.

First Lieutenant Jude O. Perry of 24 Howard avenue, has just received his discharge from the army, after a number of years of service under the flag. In 1914, he was at Fort Rodman, where he had enlisted. In 1916, he went to Mexico as a sergeant in the quartermaster's corps under General Pershing and in July, 1918, went to France, being stationed in the southern part of that country. A month before sailing overseas, he was made a first lieutenant. During his absence abroad, his mother, Mrs. Marguerite Perry, died of heart trouble and his brother Alfred was a victim of the influenza. Lieutenant Perry's travels took him through Spain, Africa and Gibraltar. Lieutenant Perry is proprietor of the Baylies Square garage.

Corporal Norris J. Drew Served Six Months on the Firing Line With the Artillery.

After six months of service in the 44th Artillery, A. E. F., Corporal Norris J. Drew has arrived at his home, 48 South Pleasant street, Fairhaven.

Corporal Norris J. Drew.

He was in the thick of the fighting at Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, Bouillon-court and Thiancourt. Corporal Drew enlisted at Fort Adams in 1917 and went overseas last summer leaving Quebec and arriving in Liverpool, England in just two weeks. After a brief stay in England he left for France where his outfit quickly found its way into action.

Returned Home from Active Duty Overseas Yesterday Afternoon.

Everett B. Morris, yeoman, first class, the first New Bedford man in the Naval Reserve force to report for active duty at Newport when war was declared, reached his home in this city at 60 Bay street yesterday afternoon from overseas. Mr. Morris enrolled in the reserve force at the first meeting held here in High school hall in 1917 and the day after war was declared received orders directing him to report at Newport. With him went one other New Bedford boy, Joseph Hardman but Morris happened to be first to report at the receiving station. After service for a time at Newport, he was transferred to Washington, and then given assignment overseas, sailing for France May 31, 1918. Since that date he has been eight months in France, two months in England and two months at sea. Most of the period he has been assigned to work at the different naval aero stations on the French coast and has gained promotion from third class yeoman to first class during that time.

Everett B Morris

Morris returned on the Louisville which reached New York last week and finally secured a furlough to come home. He anticipates being placed on the inactive last some time this week. Before joing the navy Mr. Morris was employed as a clerk at the Dartmouth mill.

By a strange coincidence, Easter Saturday seems to have played a prominent part in his movements. It was on Easter Saturday, 1917, that he was called to service; it was Easter Saturday, 1918, that he sailed for overseas and it was Easter Saturday, 1919, that he sailed from Brest, France, for home again.

In the older picture is shown the Concert Hall building, prior to the disastrous fire early in the seventies, when that section was nearly gutted. At the extreme end of the structure is seen on the roof of the Knight building the large sign of William Knight, upholsterer and furniture maker, while just beyond in front of where now stands the Five Cents Savings bank building are seen large elm trees which at one time adorned the sides of the main thoroughfares of New Bedford. Over Lawton's drug store was located the Young Men's Christian association, and the sign of the then young society is plainly seen in the Parlow photograph.

LETTER CARRIER HERE 32 YEARS

Sept- 24-1919

Sylvester Paul Dies at Age of 65 Years---Never Recovered Fully from Fall on Ice When Ribs Entered Lungs.

Sylvester Paul, for 32 years a letter carrier in this city, died at his home, 25 Emerson street, last night, never having fully recovered from a fall on the ice two years ago during performance of his duty, when fractured ribs penetrated his lungs. Although his injuries did not entirely heal, he returned to work and remained at his post until February of this year. He was a member of Branch 18, National Association of Letter Carriers, and also a member of the Mutual Benefit association. He was 65 years of age, having been born in this city March 25, 1854.

With the exception of one or two years, he has lived here all his life. When a young man, he was a car conductor in this city, and later went to Detroit, where he continued in the car service as conductor. On September 22, 1887, he was appointed a substitute carrier, and on August 15, 1888, was appointed a regular. His routes were, in turn, from Ash street to Rockdale avenue, then in the centre, then at the north end when the station was established there, and finally in the centre from Elm to Maxfield streets, west of Purchase and east of County streets.

Battery D apr 10-1919 Officers Speak to Home Folks

By Captain Roger W. Eckfeldt.

"At this wonderful moment of our return to our homes and families I want to say the one feeling that is uppermost in my mind—that of pride and happiness in the men of Battery D from New Bedford, which I command. Coming away with the battery from the United States 18 months ago, and having lived and fought with these men for a year and a half, I can only feel deeply their courage and spirit in hardships and dangers and their noble sacrifice for the good of all."

Captain Norris K. Cairns.

"To my command came Battery D sometime after it reached France and we fought through Chateau Thierry and the big battles together, when the big test as to what was in the men came. They were splendid soldiers—and perhaps that is the highest tribute I can pay them. They fought with equal bravery and initiative in dug outs or trenches or on top of ground, and Battery D made an excellent record everywhere. For some period I have been regimental adjutant. That gave me the opportunity to know the battery from a different angle, and Battery D measured high. It is a splendid organization in every way, and while transfers and replacements changed the personnel from time to time, Battery D was always the "New Bedford battery."

By First Lieutenant Lester Lewis.
(Only New Bedford Officer to Serve Entire War with Battery.)

"It has been a wonderful year and a half for us from New Bedford. I have been with the battery from its organization to this moment, truly the happiest any of us have known. It has been my good fortune to have been uninterruptedly with the command, to have shared with them the trials and the dark hours and to have shared with them the glory of victory and the supreme happiness of this home-coming. Never a finer set of men lived. To have been an officer with them is an experience that I shall cherish so long as I live."

Major Roger D. Swaim.

By Major Roger D. Swaim.

"Battery D will always be my battery; I started with it, took it to France and although detached in person for some months, my heart was always with those New Bedford boys. There were none better in the army. They answered the call with never a falter, made a wonderful record as fighters and good Americans and when I was finally assigned to the battalion command, it seemed like getting home again. You see where you found me this morning on the transport—right up here on the deck close to Battery D."

MISS FLETCHER TO ENTER PRATT

Sept 26 1919

South End Girl Will Study to Become Dietitian in Institutional Household Science Course.

Dorothy L. Fletcher of 307 Pleasant street will leave the city this week for Brooklyn, N. Y., where she will enter Pratt Institute to study the Institutional Household Science course. Miss Fletcher, who is 19 years, plans to become a dietitian. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Fletcher. They will accompany her to Brooklyn and will spend a week's vacation in and about New York city. Miss Fletcher was born in Baltimore, Md., and received her elementary training in the Baltimore public schools. The family moved to Fall River in 1914, where she graduated from the B. M. C. Durfee high school with the class of 1918. She came to New Bedford in August, 1918, and has remained here since. Upon graduation from high school, she was too young to enter Pratt Institute, being obliged to wait until this year.

Meeting of a Hundred Men at Naval Base in Fairhaven Last Evening.

OVER ONE THOUSAND ARE ELIGIBLE HERE

Temporary Quarters at Fairhaven Until Permanent Ones Are Secured Here.

The men from New Bedford and vicinity who have served in any branch of the naval service are eligible to become members of a navy club now in process of formation here. There was an enthusiastic meeting of about a hundred men at the Fairhaven naval base last evening, practically all of the men including those who have served at some time at this base, many of them now discharged after having had sea duty in home waters and some of them in overseas duty. From New Bedford there were about one thousand men who served in some branch of the naval service, while there were many more from towns in this vicinity, and this club is to be a social organization for the use of these men. Men who have been discharged or released from the service will be eligible.

BISHOP KINSMAN STATES HIS VIEWS

July 17 - 1919

Reason for Leaving Bishopric Because He Does Not Agree With Teachings of Church.

Holds That His Church Is Non-Committal on Three Vital Points of Faith.

Welmington, Del., July 17.—The Right Rev. Frederick J. Kinsman yesterday made public a long letter to the Right Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, presiding bishop of the Protestant-Episcopal church, resigning as bishop of the diocese of Deleware. Bishop Kinsman's proposed action has been known to his friends for some time, but came as a surprise to most members of the church in this city.

The bishop in his letter, said he could not reconcile its teachings in the matter of Holy Orders and Sacraments with his own views at this time, but praises the church for what it is doing and though he withdraws from the ministry, he does not ask to be excluded from the church.

Sump wants to go through several more weeks in his present pastorate in order that several projects which he has started, may be well underway when he leaves for this city.

Soon after coming to Cortland, Mr. von der Sump affiliated with the Ministerial association of Cortland county and vicinity, and has taken a leading part in all its activities. It was he who last fall broached the subject of forming a Church Federation in the city to promote a larger and closer co-operation, and has worked in season and out of season to secure the adoption of the plan, which has now reached the stage where it has been adopted by all the Protestant clergy, a constitution drafted, and a permanent organization is to be effected by the election of officers at the next meeting of the body.

Mr. von der Sump is a Mason, fond of all out-door activities, and an enthusiastic fisherman and golfer. He is married, and has one daughter, Mildred, who is four years old.

Miss Elva M. Parker

Every girl and every boy in New Bedford will grow straight and strong or it will not be the fault of Miss Elva M. Parker, grade supervisor of physical training, if they don't.

For Miss Parker has taken under her supervision all the school children who suffer from such definite and common defects as round shoulders, hollow back, flat back, and lateral curvature of the spine, and has prescribed for them a special course of corrective exercises which the children perform under the direction of the teacher, and in the more serious cases resulting from defective posture, by the parents in the home.

Miss Parker has made a special study of the needs in the school, and has proved that cases of round shoulders, the most prevalent defect among school children, positively can be cured by class room exercises. In cases where it has been necessary to give the child exercises at home, Miss Parker has found earnest co-operation on the part of most parents, which greatly facilitates the corrective process. Pictures taken at intervals show remarkable corrective development and improvement in posture.

PROMOTION FOR A. E. HOFFMIRE

Dec 6 1919

Former New Bedford Y. M. C. A. Official Made Executive Secretary of the Northeastern Department.

Boston, May 8.—Arthur E. Hoffmire, who for nearly two years has been camp general secretary at Devens, has just been appointed executive secretary, northeastern department, of the National War Work council, Y. M. C. A., and will take up his duties Monday, May 12th, according to an announcement made here today. He succeeds Edward W. Hearne who recently resigned to reassume his pre-war position as state association secretary for Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and comes into the wider field of headquarters activities well equipped to carry on the war work council's extended demobilization service in New England.

Mr. Hoffmire has been an enthusiastic "Y" worker for nearly 15 years, having entered association service in January, 1905, as assistant secretary at the New Bedford Y. M. C. A., where he remained for six years, at the end of which period he was acting secretary. In 1911 Mr. Hoffmire accepted general secretaryship of the North Adams, Mass., association, where he remained until the spring of 1917. Upon the entrance of the United States into the world war Mr. Hoffmire, at his own request, was transferred to the association war work and donned the Red Triangle as secretary of Hut 23 at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass. On February 1st, 1918, Mr. Hoffmire succeeded Kenneth Robbie of Springfield as camp secretary, a position he has held up to the present time.

CELEBRATES HIS 84TH BIRTHDAY

Mar 11. 1919

William H. A. Tobey Recalls Incidents of His Circus Days 25 Years Ago---Just as Young as He Looks.

William Henry Augustus Tobey of 163 River road, veteran circus man, is celebrating his 84th birthday today by ably demonstrating that he is just as young as he used to be. Mr. Tobey remarked this morning: "Yes, sir, I'm just as young as I feel, and I can still show the young bloods a few steps when it comes to a showdown. I ran away with the circus 62 years ago and I stayed with it for 25 years.

William H. A. Tobey.

"This talk about letting the circus show here on Saturday reminds me of a time when we were being cheated in Ohio. They wanted an enormous price to allow us to show in a certain town on the Ohio side of a river. We plugged their little game by hiring a ferry across that river for 24 hours, and we exhibited in the state of Kentucky, where we were allowed to show for almost a song.

"When two more years have passed I will celebrate my 50th wedding anniversary and I'm sure praying for that anniversary. I'll be a stranger where I go after this life, so I reckon I'll stick around a little longer. I have no children and only my wife. My relatives are all dead and gone. Here's hoping the coming years will find me on deck."

New Bedford Boy Saw the Hun Fleet Surrender

Nov 15 1919

William Kinyon.

Word has been received from William Kinyon, who is serving on the U. S. S. New York, Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman's flagship, on service in European water. In this letter he states that he saw the surrender of the German grand fleet to the British and American fleets in the North Sea.

He further stated that there were many false alarms while he served there. Many times at night the alarm spread that the Germans were out again and the fleet started out to scour the sea for them. However, they always scurried back to Kiel. Many times they were forced to duck torpedoes but they got several subs in retaliation. He expected to have a parade and review in Liverpool by the time the letter had reached his home here.

WAR CROSS AND CITATION SENT TO SOLDIER'S HOME

June 13-1919

Honor Came Unexpectedly Yesterday to New Bedford Soldier.

JEROME C. PEDRO REWARDED FOR BRAVERY

Latter Was Severely Wounded in Action and Recently Left Hospital.

For his courage and coolness as a runner in the vicinity of the Medeoh Farm, France, Private Jerome C. Pedro of 32 Weaver street, yesterday received a Croix de Guerre and citation from the French government, the honors coming to him as a great surprise. The citation, signed by the chief of the French armies of east, follows:

"From October 3-8, 1918, near the Medeoh Farm, he displayed courage and coolness as a runner, carried several messages under violent machine gun and artillery bombardment." The citation was dated February 16, 1919.

Pedro is a member of the Dreadnaught Social club. He enlisted in New Bedford just after the United States declared war in 1917. He was sent to Fort Slocum and was then transferred to the 9th infantry of the second division, with which he went overseas in September, 1917. He was later at the Toul sector, second battle of the Marne, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, Belleau Woods, and at the Champagne front, where he was wounded in the left forearm and also shot through the chest, barely missing his heart.

He was sent to a hospital at Tours, remaining there eight weeks. He was then sent to the states, landing in New York and then being sent to general hospital No. 3 at Rahway, N. J. Later he went to Camp Devens, where he was discharged.

He is to leave soon for Boston where he will study electrical engineering in one of the government schools.

WEARING TWO WOUND STRIPES

Corporal John A. Grime of the Marines Home on a Furlough

Must Return to Hospital to Undergo Further Surgical Treatment.

Wearing two gold service stripes and two gold wound stripes Corporal John A. Grime of 18 Cleveland street arrived home from France yesterday. He was a member of the sixth regiment of marines and fought at Belleau Woods, Chateau Thierry and Soissons. At the latter place a dose of gas and a stray machine gun bullet put him out of commission for the rest of the war. He was sent to a rest camp which was something like a coal heaver's job, according to Corporal Grime. Here he contracted diptheria and on the way home was overtaken by the "flu" which put him out for all time as far as service was concerned. His heart and lungs are still affected.

Grime enlisted New Years day, 1917, and went overseas in March. In France he took part in the big battles. Like all marines who fought over there, he has the highest praise for the second regular army division. Particularly he lauds the 9th and 23rd United States infantry regiments of the divisions for their splendid work; they worked with the marines like clockwork and there was never a hitch, with their objective always gained.

At the present time Corporal Grime is under treatment at a Marine hospital for the wound in his left side. He has a sharpshooter's medal gained while on this side. In speaking of the war Grime took occasion to differ with Lieutenant Wheeler and his article in The Standard Sunday. He states that the French used the men over there excellently. The women of France are the business heads of the country and the only ones who were at all stingy in their ways. The men were the best of sports.

"The Y. M. C. A. used us pretty bad, we thought," declared Grime as he puffed at a cigarette this morning when interviewed by a Standard reporter. "The question all the boys ask is where does the money they get in donations go? They get the most from the War Chest and every charitable fund but they charge us more for things than we pay at the commissary. It's funny and there's something queer about it. For the Salvation Army, K. of C. and Red Cross I have only the highest words of praise. They were fine to us wounded boys."

Grime expects to receive his discharge when the wound in his side has healed sufficiently to allow his

Croix de Guerre. He has previously won the French Military Medal and so far as is known is the only New Bedford boy who has achieved both of these decorations. The French Military Medal he won for bravery August 15, 1917, when under a terrific artillery fire he carried messages from battalion headquarters keeping in touch with the advanced infantry lines after all telephonic communication had been broken.

Details of the awarding of the Croix de Guerre to him have not as yet been received here, but in a letter to his mother this morning, he enclosed the ribbon from it and likewise the ribbon from the Military Medal—and Mrs. Taylor was proudly displaying them to her friends this morning. Corporal Taylor was very modest in his reference to his latest honor, simply enclosing the ribbon, saying that he had been awarded the decoration, and then proceeding to a discussion of his possible transfer to Canada preparatory to coming home.

He is a corporal in the 59th Brockville infantry, having enlisted in the Canadian forces shortly after the outbreag of the war. Previous to that he was employed by the New England Cotton Yarn at what is now the Fairhaven mills.

In his letter he says that he has just been discharged from a hospital in London, where he was taken suffering with an attack of influenza and is looking forward to his speedy dis-

Morris Chairs, Mirrors, Pictures and Pianos Were Horrors of War for the Germans.

The dugouts of the German soldiers, abandoned before the fearful onslaught of the Americans at St. Mihiel, with their pianos, art squares on the floors, morris chairs, mirrors and pictures on the walls must have been a surprise to the Allied soldiers who had been living in mud-holes.

They certainly made an impression on Servt. Alfred Morosse, a member of the old 4th Company, who was transferred from that company to Auto Repair Detachment No. 2, and went over into the latter branch of the service. Sergeant Morosse returned to his home at 226 State street last week, after fourteen months' service overseas. Before entering the service, the young man drove a truck for The Standard.

Sergeant Morosse tells of the fight which had for four years waged in the St. Michiel sector, and of the wiping out of that salient in two days by the combined efforts of the Allied armies after the entrance of the Americans into the struggle. The German dugouts, with their home-like furnishings, were a revelation to the soldiers who had lived in nothing but mud.

Sergt. Morosse had charge of 156 trucks, 28 tractors, 8 Dodges and 16 motor cycles at the front, and the activity on the firing line, kept him constantly on the move, some weeks getting only two or three nights' sleep. The young man tells of the opening of the big offensive on the night of July 14. He was awakened at 12 o'clock at night to see the sky all red and hear the long range gun shooting, and see the shells dropping all about him every three minutes. The fire kept up steadily from midnight to five in the morning. The young man saw all kinds of aeroplane fighting, and on one occasion saw a French aviator bring down two German planes.

Dear Friend:

Writing you just a few lines to let you know that I am in the best of health. Things are looking pretty good up here. I am sending you a copy of the Stars and Stripes.

We are not in the same place now but have been moved to the northern part of France. Most of our men have been transferred to the companies but I am still one of the lucky ones. ANOTHER 100 P.C. WAR FAMILY

Dec 15- 1919

John Wilson Was in England When Armistice Was Signed---Arrived in Halifax Thanksgiving.

Another 100 per cent. war family has been found in this city, of which Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson of 85 Myrtle street are the proud parents. Three sons and a son-in-law was the family's quota to the Allied cause.

One son, John Wilson, is back home to tell of the wild scenes enacted in England at the signing of the armistice. John, a member of a railway construction unit, was stationed at an English training post ready to embark for France when the cessation of hostilities arrived. He sailed from Liverpool a few days later and arrived in Halifax harbor Thanksgiving day.

He enlisted here early in spring and left New Bedford March 11. He was ordered to a Canadian camp and there remained until July, when he sailed for overseas. Wilson arrived in this city last week on a 14 day pass and on his return to camp anticipates receiving an honorable discharge.

Harry Wilson is overseas serving with the 34th headquarters company. He sailed from Fort Adams in July.

James Wilson, Jr., a member of the 50th infantry is now at Camp Dix, N. J. He enlisted at the local recruiting office in March and was ordered to Camp Sevice. He has been at Camp Dix. He was employed at the iron foundry prior to enlistment.

Sergeant Ustus Abgast was at Fort Rodman before embarking for "No Man's Land." He left here in September and is a member of the replacement troops

In addition to the cross, Corporal White is decorated with a divisional citation, two overseas stripes and a gold star bordering the service chevrons, designating him as one of the first 1,000,000 over. Corporal White returned in February, arriving at New York a passenger on the La France.

Corporal White spoke in eloquent terms of the treatment received by the colored troops from their commander "Bill" Haywood. "A better leader could not be wished," he said. "Colonel Haywood," he continued, "brave as a lion and meek as a lamb just inoculated his Rattlesnake division with that spirit and the fact that more than 200 of his men were later decorated with the croix de guerre or D. HAS SERVED 33 YEARS IN ARMY

Colonel Barry, New Commander at Fort Rodman, Fought Indians and Spanish---Year in France.

The reorganization of the regular army is a serious problem, according to Colonel Michael H. Barry, who arrived Thursday to assume command at Fort Rodman. He explained that with the end of demobilization, there would be a force of regulars smaller than that of the days before the war, by the number of the casualties sustained. Military matters are marking time, he said, until the army is back to a peace footing, when it will be necessary to go to work in earnest to fill the ranks of the regulars.

July 16 - 1919

Leo. G. Adams.

Mrs. Jennie Adams of 1679 Acushnet avenue has received an official telegram from the government informing her of the death of her son, Leo George Adams, in France. Mr. Adams was with the Naval Reserve forces. The telegram follows: "Bureau regrets to advise your son, Leo George Adams, seaman, U. S. N. R. F., died July 7th at army hospital center, Savenay, France, from injuries received by fall through hatch. On account of the military laws of France, it is impossible to return the remains at this time. Interment was made July 9 at French cemetery No. 22. Bureau extends its sincere sympathy to you in the loss of your son."

Adams was 22 years old at the time of his death. Before enlisting in the navy, July 29, 1917, at Newport, he was employed piping at the Manomet mill. He studied at the Lincoln school and private schools. He was a well-known north end athlete and an active member of the Shubert club. Adams was aboard the San Diego when she sank 6½ miles out of New York last July.

He leaves eight sisters: Misses Agnes, Louise, Nellie, Noella and Mrs. Annie Murphy, Nash road; Mrs. Emily McMullen, Bowditch street; Mrs. Leah Sawyer, Glennon street and Mrs. Florence Pepin, 1679 Acushnet avenue; also three brothers, William, Peter and John; and a father and mother.

Dear Mother and Father:

I hope this letter finds you in good health, as it leaves me that way. I was sick with the influenza last October and nearly died. I was at a base hospital and that is why I didn't come home with my regiment. If it hadn't been for the good care which nurses gave me I wouldn't be here today, as I was some sick.

They treated me fine. Oranges, chicken and ice cream to eat every day and the best of care and treatment. It is no wonder that I decided to keep right on living. I can think of nothing else to tell you of interest, so will close now. Your loving son, George.

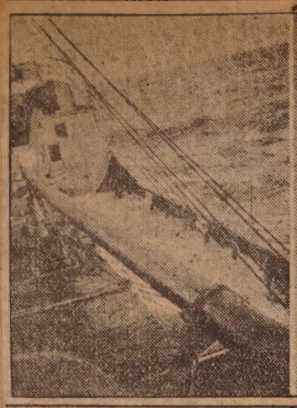
CHIEF ENGINEER EDWARD A. CLARK HOME AFTER SEVEN MONTHS ON "LAKE DELANEY"

Jan 11 - 1919



After spending the last eight months on the Lake Delancey cruising up and down the coast carrying coal, Chief Engineer Edward A. Clark of 216 Middle street, arrived in Boston, Saturday, and spent the week-end at his home in New Bedford.

Mr. Clark returns to Boston tonight, from where the Lake Delancey, on which he has been stationed since last June, will sail at once for Newport News, Va.

Mr. Clark saw the Lake Delancey launched last June in Buffalo, and returned to the coast on it. There are 240 more similar style boats to be brought down from The Lakes as soon as navigation opens, some of which will undoubtedly be used for the transportation of sugar, an assurance that the sugar shortage of a year ago will not be repeated.

The boats built on the Lakes are loaded with coal, taken to Quebec, where they are unloaded, from there they go to Sidney, Nova Scotia, where they are again loaded and the coal brought to the eastern ports of the United States. The boats are built to the utmost limit to allow passing through the locks of the canal, being only a foot less in length and width of the canal locks.

New Bedford Man With Engineers at Tours Is Promoted.

Arthur C. Himes, whose home is at No. 41 Parker street, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in the United States army in France. Lieutenant Himes left New Bedford with a contingent of drafted soldiers from Division 2 October 5, 1917. He was commissioned from the ranks. He is stationed at present in Tours, with the army engineer corps.

Lieut. Arthur C. Himes.

Lieutenant Himes, for some time after he entered upon his military career, was stationed at Camp Devens, with Company D, 302nd regiment infantry. He was promoted to the rating of sergeant the following month, and on May 24, 1918, was transferred to Camp Lee, Va., where he received his commission as a second lieutenant, on June 1, 1918.

For some time thereafter he was stationed at Camp Sherman, Ohio. He went overseas last August, and served until February, of this year, with the pioneer infantry. He was later transferred, however, to the engineer corps, with whom he served as camp personnel adjutant. In March he was enrolled in the engineer corps.

He took the examinations for promotion last April, but did not learn of his success, until a short time ago. His promotion went into effect May 30. He expects to be able to come home sometime during the latter part of the current month.

Lieutenant Himes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Himes, and before he entered the army lived with his parents at their residence at No. 41 Parker street. In civilian life he was employed at the Gosnold mill.

HOME FROM RED CROSS SERVICE

aug 21 - 1919

Miss Lena B. Dexter of Mattapoisett Went Overseas in 1917---Her Wide Experience.

Miss Lena B. Dexter, who served overseas with the Red Cross, arrived home in Mattapoisett recently. She volunteered her services in July, 1917, and worked for a short time in the office of the secretary of the war council of the Red Cross in Washington.

Miss Lena B. Dexter.

In October of that year she sailed for France, where she headed a group of 15 Red Cross workers in Paris who aided the French needy. After the arrival of the American Expeditionary Forces, she was assigned to the personnel bureau, allotting new nurses where needed in France and Italy.

Tonight she will lecture at the town hall in Mattapoisett on "Paris During War Days."

WARD M. PARKER BACK FROM WAR WEARING MEDAL

mar 21- 1919

New Bedford Man Won Croix de Guerre for Bravery Under Fire.

S A SERGEANT IN THE TANK CORPS

Plenty of Action and Was in Fights at St. Mihiel.

Looking fit and wearing on his breast the Croix de Guerre awarded him by the French for bravery and devotion to duty as a motor cyclist, Sergt. Ward M. Parker of the American Tank corp arrived in this city last night and leaves this evening for Camp Mills. His brief visit here is one continual round of handshakes. He has lost about 35 pounds and he seems slightly deaf, due, probably, to the terrific noise in battle within the confines of the light tanks in which Parker served as driver.

The sergeant's soldiering experience has been one thrill after another and his career in France has been, without doubt one of the most interest of New Bedford boys in the service. He left here as mess sergeant of Battery D, of the 102 F. A., was later transferred to the motorcycle branch of the service and rode at high speed over hundreds of miles of French roads in the darkness, carrying officers an destablishing liaison, and most recently was serving in the tank corp in some of the most important of the battle sectors. He went throughout the action without receiving a wound, although he was in a hospital a month or so before the closing of the war, with an infected neck, which he believes was due to mustard gas.

Sergeant Parker was a member of Co. C, 344th battalion, tank corps, an outfit which suffered 76 per cent casualties, owing to its hazardous work. He was in command of one of the tanks in the first line which went "over the top" for the Americans. This was at Seicheprey, and it was by strange coincidence that this happened to be at a point where he had left Battery D some time before to join the tank service. On this occasion he drove the major of the organization. There were 142 light Renault two-man tanks in the American service. The machine which Parker was driving advanced a distance of 500 yards into the battle when mechanical trouble occurred and the tank was abandoned. Jumping out of the tank, Parker grabbed a rifle and ammunition from a doughboy who had been put out of action, and advanced with the infantry.

From St. Mihiel sector Parker was one of 12 tank men to operate tanks in a quiet part of the line to the right. Children were attending school within three miles of the lines in this place where the tankers went to play as an American ruse. The ruse worked, for the Huns, learning of the activities of these tanks, and receiving information from their aviators that there was much activity among the Americans, drew three divisions of troops away from the Argonne to stop what appeared to them to be an American advance in that part of the line. There was nothing doing, however, and things were made a trifle easier for the Americans in the Argonne. To make the Huns believe there was an advance planned, the detachment of 12 tanks passed through six towns in two nights. Double tracks were made and roads were somewhat torn up to give the impression that a far larger number of fighting machines were assembled.

In the Argonne Parker got within

mar 21- 1919

200 yards of the lost battalion but a well directed shot put his tank out of commission. He was not wounded, fortunately, but was sent to a hospital with the infection on his neck.

He had some experience at putting Hun machine gun nests out of action, accounting for nine in one month. The plan is to "run over or shoot up" the nests but it was considered better to avoid running over and crushing them so that the machine guns could be obtained and operated against their former owners. In many cases, however, it was necessary to head right for the nest because the Germans would not relinquish their hold.

The tanks proceeded anywhere from 50 to 150 yards in advance of the line of infantry, although at times tanks on exploring trips went as far as four and five miles ahead. The light tanks are able to make nine or ten miles an hour. There are 17 in a company, one for the commanding officer, one for the wireless and three platoons of five fighting tanks each. They move in platoon formation. They are considered a combination of infantry, artillery and cavalry, therefor the insignia worn at the top of the left sleeve is a combination of red, yellow and blue.

Sergt. Parker said yesterday that the ordinary rifle bullet would have no effect on the tank armor, but occasionally would find one of the several narrow slits through which the men inside the tank picked out their paths. This resulted in many deaths. The Huns had a tank gun, which Parker described as about six times the size of an ordinary gun and fired bullets in the same proportion. These would penetrate the tank armor on a direct hit, but this was offset when the tanks were designed to ricochet the bullets.

Parker said that he also found plenty of thrills in driving a motocycle over the battle areas. One of the requirements, which necessitated nerve and plenty of it in the man operating the machine, was driving officers down to headquarters in the Toul sector. It was necessary to drive the machine down behind the second line trench. He was fortunate in not being injured, for the slightest turn in the wrong direction might have spilled both himself and his companious to their death. On one occasion, he did spill a lieutenant out of the side car. The driving was mostly done in the very early morning and it was necessary to go over bad roads without the aid of lights. At times, he traveled at the rate of 40 to 50 miles an hour. On one occasion, he was traveling along at a fast rate when a big dark object loomed up ahead of him. It was an ambulance, traveling at high rate in the opposite direction. Parker blew his whistle, turned his machine and put his foot on the ground and missed the other vehicle by the slightest margin. But Parker ran over his own foot in the mixup.

Of Parker's motorcycle duties, the French army made the following commendation: "Brave and devoted motorcyclist soldier, maintaining the communication with the artillery, has fulfilled his mission under a most violent bombardment of shells of the largest calibre and gasses during 26 consecutive hours."

An official American army order of May 13 commended Parker for his part in the fighting of the early morning of April 20.

Parker sailed from Marseilles and arrived in New York with the first returning tank fighters. He was sent to Camp Mills.

During a trip to Paris, Sergt. Parker hunted up George W. B. Britt, who is now on the staff of Stars and Stripes; and a New Bedford reunion took place, a feature of the occasion being the proposing of toasts to the members of the Dartmouth club.

Sergt. Parker expects to be discharged from the service in about a month.

though he bears none of the scars of battle, Dr. Choquette is but one of two surviving surgeons who sailed with the 85th, to return. Captain Omer J. Flinn of Butte, Montana, is the other man who came through unscathed.

Rendering untiring first aid to the wounded doughboys almost never more than 200 yards from the front lines was the precarious and hazardous task of Captain Choquette. St. Mihiel, Meuse-Moselle, Meuse-Argonne and the Toul sector were visited during the thickest of the offensives.

Dr. Choquette returns with two citations for extraordinary gallantry while under fire and for sticking to his dug-out post despite heavy shelling. He enlisted in October, 1917, but was not called until January, to Camp Greenleaf, Ga. Changes were rapid and many, and for periods he was at the Rockefeller institute, New York city, and the Army Medical hospital at Washington. He was later moved to Camp Custer, Battle Creek, Michigan, and there assigned to the 338th infantry.

His company sailed from an Atlantic port early in July and arrived at Liverpool July 14. A hurried trip to Southampton, then across the channel and the men from the town made famous by "Poast Toasties" arrived at St. Nazaire. There they were made replacement troops and Captain Choquette followed his men to Toul, late in October.

Following the armistice Captain Choquette was granted two weeks' furlough to attend the victory celebrations in France. He sailed on the Leviathan March 26, from Brest.

TELLS OF WAR EXPERIENCES

mar 7 1919

Corporal Homer B. Gooding Relates Story of His Life in the Army.

Saw Plenty of Action in Alsace, Lorraine and Near Verdun.

The experiences in France of "just an ordinary doughboy," as Corporal Homer B. Gooding described himself, served to interest the members of the Men's Club of the Universalist church last evening. Corporal Gooding was a member of the Fifth Division, Co. L, Fifth Infantry, and served in Alsace and Lorraine, attended an officers' training school, and went back to his regiment at the time the American troops were beginnning the direct attack on the Germans in the region of the Argonne forest, where he got a touch of mustard gas that sent him to a series of hospitals, where he was a patient when the armistice was signed.

Mr. Gooding's point of view was that of a soldier who carried out orders, with little knowledge of the reason therefor until after the deed had been done. He said that the American army had quite a job to drive the Germans out of their dugouts and trenches, and the soldiers who were trained for the American army never could understand why they were trained for open warfare until they got into the fighting in France, when the training counted, for once the Germans were out of the ground, they were kept out, and the open warfare continued.

Corporal Gooding started as a warrior among the drafted men from Division 3 who left in September, 1917, and he stayed at Camp Devens until February, 1918, where he had six months' training. He was transferred to the regular army division, which is designated by a red diamond, and spent six weeks at Camp Greene. His next move was to Camp Merritt, then to New York, and he sailed on a former Russian freight steamer for France, April 15 of last year.

There were 13 ships and one battle cruiser that passed out of New York harbor that day, and eight of the steamers made the trip across together. He saw no submarines, but when two days out from France 15 destroyers formed a protecting formation around the troop ships to finish the voyage.

Sailed on April 15.

Corporal Gooding said that he did not see a submarine, but the last night afloat the regiment was startled out of its bunks by seven explosions, and all hands climbed to the deck prepared to go over the side. It developed that the explosions were depth bombs which had been dropped by the destroyers when the ship on which he was a passenger dropped behind, and was evidently in danger of being torpedoed by a submarine that was hovering around.

He landed at Brest April 28, and after being deloused, the regiment began its tour of France in the famous military freight cars built for men and horses only. In the first camp the regiment spent a month, the different companies being billeted in French villages, and the only time that the letter L of his company stood for luck was when it was the second company to be dropped off in the march to billets, Company L being the last in the regiment and the first to reach billets.

The regiment had to go into the fight sooner than anticipated because of the German drive at Soissons. The regiment was sent first to a quiet sector in Alsace, and on this long trip in the cars, Corporal Gooding said that the soldiers slept "like kittens", one overlapping another.

All France is divided into hills, according to the observation of Corporal Gooding. While in this section, he saw Boche planes attacked by anti-aircraft guns, but he said that during all his experience he had never seen an enemy plane dropped by these guns. His company spent two weeks in the trenches at the front, and he explained in detail the work that was given his squad and his rounds of the listening posts during the night. At that time one American and one French soldier were in each station, and the Americans wer learning the and the Americans were learning the

In one of the villages where the company was billeted, Corporal Gooding said that he was corporal of the guard one day. "That meant that I was to see that nobody got drunk, and that the saloons did not open until 5 p. m.," he said. "But whether the saloons were open or not, the soldiers could find something to drink. In the army a man can get drunk with no saloons open at all."

That particular day one of the men of his company who said he had "only three drinks of white wine," was "as drunk as an owl," he said, and in this condition he was prepared to lick the kaiser and the whole German army. "He was full of the fighting spirit," said the speaker. A few days later when things were less spirited the same private brought in reports of having seen a group of wounded French soldiers returning from the front, and from his description and his conclusions, as transmitted to his companions, the kaiser was not in as great danger of his life as he was when the French wine had flowed more freely.

Corporal Homer B. Gooding.

In this section Co. L climbed mountains in the dark, which Corporal Gooding said was the one thing that his regiment had to do everywhere it went, carrying full packs, gas mask, tin hat, and 220 rounds of ammunition, never knowing when a mis-step might take one over the side of the mountain. The work in the trenches consisted mainly of going in at 8 o'clock at night and remaining until daylight, and sleeping days, when the Germans did not continue shelling throughout the day. He was startled by a rifle shot from one of his posts in the middle of one night, and when he went out through the trenches to find out the cause of it, he learned that one of his men, Larry Clark, who could always hear Germans, had popped his gun to wake up his French companion, who was inclined to sleep.

He said that while in both of the alleged "quiet sectors" when his regiment was sent, the men were sent over the top several times, but never did they find Germans in the trenches. They appeared to know when the attacks were coming and they were not there, and to Corporal Gooding this seemed rather strange. In these sectors there had been no real fighting since 1914, but when the Americans arrived there, business picked up rapidly, and the Germans began shelling and raiding. One night the Germans killed three of the company, and three Italian boys, who occupied a dugout, were killed in their shelter. The day Company L came out was pay day, and the Germans also celebrated that, for they shelled the road to the officers' quarters, and some of the men who had been up to draw their pay had difficulty getting back to their quarters with it.

On July 14 the regiment moved to the Lorraine sector, another hilly section, where the French trenches ran into the German lines, and the Germans had the Allies practically surrounded. Here again an attack was planned, and Corporal Gooding said that no Germans were out that night. "You see there was something wrong" he said. On these small sectors, it seems as tif our attacks did not come out as they ought to."

After this experience Corporal Gooding was picked to go to army candidates school, and he was not with the regiment during the St. Mihiel drive. It took him two weeks to find his regiment and company, and he located them in the region of Dead Man's Hill, near Verdun. He passed within six miles of Verdun, after having located an automobile bearing the red diamond, the insignia of the Fifth division, and making many enquiries. "The road along which we passed was as busy as Pleasant street on a circus day," he said, "with two streams of travel, one going up to the front, the other coming back, and M.P.'s in the middle of the road keeping the traffic moving."

Corporal Gooding said that he passed through towns that had been virtually wiped off the map by German shells, and all that marked them was a sign board giving the name the place once was known by, and a few battered ruined walls of buildings. He hiked several days before he caught up with Co. L, and he was soon back in his old place, after having slept on the ground in the open one night, and in a pup tent the first night he was back with his outfit. His company was moving towards the front each day, and in a steady column of twos the whole division marched snake-like along the side of a hill towards the German lines.

Co. L was assigned to the fifth wave in the advance that was planned, and being short of officers, things "were sort of mixed up," Corporal Gooding said. The 80th division was coming out as the fifth division went in, and Corporal Gooding said that companies that marched in 200 strong had about 60 men left when they marched past on the way to the rear. The Germans were sending over gas, first sneezing gas, then chlorine and mustard. While the company was waiting for supper, the kitchen having been delayed, Co. E came up and reported casualties, a shell having burst among the men, killing five and injuring others. The regiment went forward in skirmish formation, and the top that it went over was the top of a hill. As it moved along the edge of a wood, Corporal Gooding said that he saw the body of the regimental chaplain, who had been killed by a shell the night before, and then the fifth began to have a hard time.

He said that he discovered a German plane sailed down over the heads of the men, and he noted a patter on the earth around him. This was the rain of machine gun bullets from the German plane. Next came genuine shell and gas, the range of the regiment having evidently signalled from the airplane to the German gun. The regiment was given orders to take cover and the woods came in handy, although there was but one dugout and that was being used for a dressing station for wounded by the medical corps. He said that he dropped into a ditch and by his side lay part of a German rifle. "I should have saved it for a souvenir, only we were not looking for souvenirs then," he said: "We had other things to think about. We were likely to get bumped out any time."

It was while he was in this wood that a shell came over that jostled off his helmet. He had his gas mask on at the time, and the chin strap of the helmet was not in its accustomed place. When he picked up his helmet and put it back on his head, he said, he wiped it out, but after 15 or 20 minutes the side of his forehead felt a little stingy. He moved forward with the company later in the day, and spent the night behind a ridge of earth that was about as deep as the curbing of a street. His squad found some metal that had served as the roof of a small building, and this was used for a top sheet for night.

Rumors Galore.

Rumors were flying around, one of them that the Germans were coming through, and the command was to hold the line at all cost. It proved to be a false alarm so far as the Germans were concerned.

Along towards dusk, Corporal Gooding said that he felt his forehead burning more, and he tried to wipe it with his handkerchief and a towel that he carried in his slicker pocket. He slept that night with his gas mask on, using the lower part for a pillow, and in spite of the fact that shells were bursting nearby all night long, he said that he was able to sleep some.

In the morning when he noted that his head felt very sore and he also noticed that in combing his hair, bits of flesh were comed out, he thought it was time to see a doctor, although he knew from his instruction that mustard gas was bad stuff, and that nothing had been found to take out the burn. About 9:30 o'clock he went back to the dressing station, where the doctor sent him over to the first aid station. There the physician applied sag paste, and Corporal Gooding said that it did his burn quite a lot of good, but he was shipped back as a sitting patient after he had waited an hour and a half in the first aid station for the Germans to quit shelling the place. In the first field hospital he was tagged "severe", and he was stripped and given a bath. There it was that he parted with his own gas mask which he had hoped to be able to keep, but all that he had left were a few personal things that he saved in a stocking, his uniform having been changed to pajamas. He went from hospital to hospital, finally landing in evacuation hospital No. 3, where he said he saw a lot of men who had been badly gassed and died from the effects of their injuries.

"If you had seen what I saw there, you would be a long time forgetting what the Kaiser and what his men did during the war," said Corp. Gooding. "It seems a little too much to a soldier who has had that experience to let the Kaiser and the men who did these things, get away. They would not let him rest in Holland or anywhere else until they got a halter around his neck and let the scaffold fall."

He was in Base hospital No. 7 when the armistice was signed, November 1, having been wounded on October 12, and left his company on October 13. He started on his homeward journey Dec. 23, and was mighty glad to get back to the United States. He was discharged February 13.

"That was my experience, and I had plenty of chance to get bumped off, but it just happened that no shell came over with my name on it," he said.

He had some pictures of French villages in which he was billeted, and these were shown. He said that while in Lorraine he met the late Thomas Rodman Plummer, who was doing Red Cross work there, and was the first man from New Bedford that Mr. Plummer had seen.

ENJOYS LEAVE IN FRENCH TOWN

April 20 · 1919

Mando Branchino Has Wonderful Experiences While on Short Furlough Over There.

The following letter has been received from Private M. Branchino with the A. E. F. in France:

American Expeditionary Forces.
M. T. C. R. P. No. 772, France.
Verneiul, 3-22-19.

Dear Brother Robert:

It is my desire to make my first attempt producing an air from the tingling notes of an Underwood typewriter where I find it not possible to step on both pedals and bang away as I used to in my former days on the piano. Among an unusual lot of letters I recently received from my newer acquaintances made in various noted places in France while on a furlough a few weeks ago I find to have had the pleasure receiving quite a lot from the good old U. S. A. and two of them were from home. And you can rest assured they were not left long unanswered. In your letter I was glad to learn that a large number of New Bedford men, have come back and where they were greeted with a warm reception. "Gee", but I can imagine the boys how happy they must have been. Now, as to his mechanical unit I really cannot tell you definite as to when our hour of gladness will come. The colonel has expressed his appreciation of the great work that has been accomplished by his men and that in the near future we are to be relieved by other men who will proceed with the operations. It is likely to take three months before embarking for God's country. Was granted a seven day furlough four weeks this date and if you ever want to imagine a nut just think of me 2going for the station, waiting to be called back for any disciplinary action. I soon got on a slow train with my comrades heading for Lyons. Reached Lyons after 15 hours' travel; stopped two days there, leaving Lyons second Gay Paree, too good for me. oGing on another 10 hours' ride to Marseilles, made three days of it at that time Algerian troops were demobilizing; also a large body of Italian soldiers were there waiting for home orders.

Now in my travels to my leave area may probably be of little interest and had better pull away, telling you of registering in Cannes in the wee hours of the morning. All we boys had to show the provost marshall our pass which read for Cannes; he then soon got an M. P. busy taking we permissionaries to Hotel Cosmopolitan, where we were booked for seven days on the government expense, there of course occupied a swell furnished room and eats that could not have been much better, with beer, wine, and champagne if necessary. Along these delights comes the sport of giving service from real beauties, of French make, inclosing a few snap shots that were taken at the hotel, which will give you an idea of the charming four. Having said in the above lines reaching to my destination or my leave area as you may call it I want again to express myself with emphasis my tour from Cannes, Nice, Monte Carlo, Menton and a litle ways into Italy was indeed a miracle to have had my supposed seven days' rest there, whereas to many others were not so fortunate, and I can't too highly speak of such a delightful trip to a sunny part of France. These places are about the size of Fairhaven; all one can see is large casinos and grand hotels; it is a well known fact that it is no place for the working class. It is not possible to mention all the amusements and tours in this enchanted land, but there is one which must not be overlooked. On the tour from Cannes to Nice and Monte Carlo over the cornice road we fellows could see the snow capped Alps in the distance and the blue sea on the other side of the road. Stopped there three days, one day at Nice and two days in Monte Carlo. In each of these towns large casinos have been taken over by the Y. M. C. A. and are operated at full blast, furnishing American food served by efficient American girls, and planning trips every day of their sojuorn.

My two days at Monte Carlo must be said time and time again the most interesting part of the whole Riveria. Why I have found it so interesting is because I remember some time ago back home a few of us fellows went out one Sunday if I remember right for a spin to Boston, and some how one of the boys was pretty well familiar with the history of Monte Carlo, so interesting he was listening to, that made us feel all inclined to see the place. I remarked to one of the boys, saying, "Don't you wish you were born rich instead of handsome?" although I was cheated in both, my dreams of days ago have come in reality. The famous Monte Carlo, the most beautiful and storied land known the world over. It certainly gave me a thrilling sensation visiting the principle places, such as the casino, known as the greatest gambling den in the world. One can see as he is taken through the halls, the roullette tables, the size of two ordinary pool tables with the roullette wheel highly polished, in the centre of each table at the extreme end of each table there are two men with guns who are the judges witnessing the games, also there are wonderful paintings on the walls which are unquestionably the best I ever seen. Another very interesting visit was to the Princess Palace, a guide leads his ten men at one time where they get to see great halls with its scarlet floorcloths, and marble stairs and balustrades, and pillars of scagliola, the ornamental plaster work in these magnificent halls are far more beautiful than I can explain, I followed the guide with wide open eyes, gazing in delighted admiration at everything I saw, one surely satisfies his curiosities by time he comes out. The museum is another amusement where one does not regret the time. Many other sights that's too numerous to mention in one letter. Going a little further into the Italian frontier where the air is laden with the perfume of flowers. In Italy I soon became known as a native in a very short time they all spoke well of America. Long live America were their sentiments. One fine young looking woman invited me to eat dinner with her family. I hesitated a second, then asking my comrades if they cared stopping for dinner, it was funny right away asking for a good Italian spaghetti dinner, they spoke so in a hurry they nearly choked. We could see she was pleased taking us to her house, her home was not so very far from our limits believe me for strangers one could not have felt more like at home than we fellows. She offered us some wine and beer while the spaghetti was on the stove as she was busy getting things ready at the meantime humming to herself an Italian air. I asked her very politely if she would just as soon sing it over again in a little louder tone. We Americans are very fond of Italian operas. She finished her glass of wine and agreed to soon after.

Yes back at Verneiul the heart of the Motor Transport corps where work was like facing a firing squad, I had as much feeling for work, than will ever have getting into another olive drab uniform after I once get mustered out. I am only looking forward seeing greater pleasures stored for me. And as for mother, father, sisters and brothers I do not know the exact depth of your patience but I have an idea that it has a bottom.

Now that I'm coming to a close I have in view three delightful hours which will turn darkness into sunshine. The first the hour of my departure, the second hour doffing my hat to the Statue of Liberty and the final and most glorious hour entering the house.

I remain
Yours Truly Your Brother,

GLAD WAR IS OVER

Harry Ellis Writes of Feelings of Germans.

Corporal Harry R. Ellis,
Co. A, 325 Fld. Sig. Bn.,
American E. Forces.
Via New York.

Dec 15 1919

Written from France Nov. 12.

My Dear Mother: Finis la guerre!! Doesn't that sound real good to you? And believe me it really sounds a great deal better to us. It hardly seems possible that this great cosmopolitan struggle for democracy has ended, but it surely is the truth, for some of our boys have already crossed the line and shook hands with the Germans. They are glad and happy it is all over, and were only fighting for the simple reason they had to.

They had been told that their line was advancing at all other points but theirs, and I presume the high official used this lying method all over their whole line, which nevertheless, as you see, proved to be of no avail.

I received your letter Nov 8, and was more than pleased to hear from you. I wish I was able to be with you all in order to have Christmas dinner and enjoy part of that good coal, but never mind, I will be home soon after Christmas, anyway.

I am well and in the best of health, and really feeling fine.

Well, tell pop I said "Je etre returnee a America. Tout suit." Oh!! boy!! some Frenchman.

Hoping this finds you well, I remain. Your loving son, Harry.

P. S.—Oh, I had the cooties; cute little things. (American lice) Ha!!

TO WELCOME "JIM" COOPER

March 10 · 1919

Washington Club Preparing for the Return of Distinguished Soldier.

Preliminary Entertainment on Saturday Evening at Washington Club.

The British naval and military veterans of New Bedford are getting ready to welcome home Sergeant James Cooper, more familiarly known as "Jim" Cooper, who as a soldier of England in this war has won for himself notable distinction. It was in the early days of the war that Cooper, then an overseer in a New Bedford mill, heard the call of his country. Cooper was a veteran of the Boer war and though he had a wife and child here he returned to England and enlisted in his old Border regiment. He sent for his wife and child to follow him and they were lost on the Lusitania, torpedoed by a German submarine. Cooper made a vow that the Germans should pay dearly for the loss which he suffered, and accounts of the manner in which he has acquitted himself indicate that he has kept his vow. Cooper has returned to England from Hilgen, Cologne, Germany, and is now on leave in his native town of Burnley, England.

...A PRIVATE BACK A CORPORAL

Jan 7 1919

...anley H. Strojny of This City Tells of His Stay in France.

...e Was Member of 347th Infantry Regiment of 87th Division.

Corporal Stanley H. Strojny, of 16 Granfield street, is home from France, with an interesting story of his travelse since he left this country last August. Strojny was inducted into the service last June by local board No. 2 and during the same month he went to Camp Dix and two months later he was on the high seas as a member of Corporal Stanley H. Strojny.

Co. K of the 347th regiment of the 87th division bound for France. He went over the ocean as a private and he returns wearing the stripes of a corporal, won before the armistice was signed, and at that the young soldier did not get up to the fighting lines. In addition to his promotion Strojny brings back a wonderfully healthy body, a tan mixed with a rosy cheek that makes him the picture of health, the sort of a soldier that New Bedford is glad to welcome back to civil life. Strojny received his discharge yesterday at Camp Dix, in New Jersey, and he arrived home today. He has made one other trip home since coming from France last December, coming home a few weeks ago because of the serious illness of his father. His father has since passed away, but the young soldier has a mother to welcome him this time.

Strojny left New Bedford on June 26th last year, going at once to Camp Dix, where he remained for two months, sailing for overseas with his company of the 347th regiment on August 26th. The greater part of the regiment was aboard an English vessel, the Lanstephen Castle, but companies A, B, C and D were on the Persic, a member of the same convoy of transports. The voyage across was uneventful until the transports were in the English channel off the Irish coast, when the convoy was attacked by a German submarine. The Lanstephen Castle was the object of attack, but the torpedo missed that vessel and hit the Persic instead. The vessel was kept afloat and towed to an English port, and none of the men on board were injured. An American destroyer, a part of the convoying fleet, attacked the submarine, and the reports at the time were that the enemy boat paid for the attack.

From that place the division went into a rest camp at Winchester, where they remained for three days, before going to Southampton, where the division was embarked for France. The division was landed at Havre, and after a short stay there boarded trains for Pons, a training camp in southern France. This was a place only about 150 miles from Havre, yet the division was one and a half days in making the journey by train. There the regiment to which Strojny was attached detrained and the whole regiment marked some fourteen kilometers, a distance of about ten miles, to the town of Cells. These were the first American troops in this section of France, and the French people welcomed the newcomers with a warmth of emotion that quite overcame the Americans. It was a fearful hot day on the march and many of the men dropped out, the men getting into town later in the day. Some of the Americans could speak French and this helped greatly in the fraternizing between the French people and the American troops. There the regiment had bayonet drill and other exercises to fit them for front line work, remaining in the town for some two weeks, during which time the men were billeted in stone and brick houses. The regiment was then moved to Pruniers, where there was established a great aero station, and the regiment was put to work putting up steel hangars for American aircraft. At this station the aircraft were equipped with the new Liberty motors. Five immense steel hangars were erected and there were three smaller ones. It can be understood that there was no observance of any eight hour day on the job for the men; rather, many of the men worked until they slept on the job. The regiment was still on this work when the armistice was signed on Nov. 11. There had been orders that the regiment was going to be moved up to the front on the 16th, but the singing of the armistice cancelled this order. The men were in trim, however, for actual fighting, having had all the trench drills in the training camps.

Then came the celebration. The biggest nearby city was Romarantin, a city of some 100,000 people, a distance of some two and a half miles from Cells. Sixty per cent. of the regiment had promission to go to this French cit to help in the celebration. Strojny's description of the manner in which the French people of the city celebrated the signing of the armistice is one that conveys the idea that nothing quite like it was ever seen before.

It was good news to the regiment that the troops would probably be sent home, and within a month the division was moving toward Brest, the point where the division was to embark for home. Brest is a city of mud, if one takes the vivid stories that the soldiers tell who have passed through there on their way home. The soldiers walked in mud, tasted mud and slept in mud, and they came away with the impression that Brest was largely composed of mud. But nevertheless the men were very happy to know that they were at least on the way home. The home coming transport was the huge liner Mauretania, which sailed from Brest on Dec. 24, the night before Christmas, and the troops aboard had their Christmas celebration on the transport. The Mauretania reached New York on the 30th, all the regiment with the exception of Co. H being aboard of her. The division was sent to Camp Merritt, N. J., and there the men were given their first home cootie bath and an issue of brand new clothing throughout. The division was split up at Camp Merritt and the 347th regiment was sent to Camp Dix, in the same state, and there the men received their discharges.

"I'm mighty glad to be back," is the comment of Corporal Strojny, "but say, it's been a wonderful sight."

PRIV. KNOWLES ARRIVES HOME

Member of 101st Engineers Was Wounded, Gassed and Cited for Excellent Service at the Front.

First Class Private Thomas Knowles of 55 Salisbury street arrived home unexpectedly after serving in France for more than a year with the 26th Division attached to the 101st engineers. Knowles was wounded and gassed at Seicheprey and spent considerable time in the hospital as a result of his wounds. He served as special dispatch courier following this. He was attached to the headquarters of the army of occupation in Coblenz, Germany.

He was released from service over there by a special order signed by General John J. Pershing. Following is a copy of the special citation awarded Private Knowles for excellent service:

"Upon your detachment from these headquarters for return to the United States, I desire to express my gratitude and appreciation for the splendid assistance you have always given me. Although you were wounded when only a small force had arrived in France you never shirked a duty in the slightest degree and you can carry with you always the knowledge that when the country of your adoption called, you answered with every energy.

The armistice deprived you of going to a candidates school to which you had been recommended. In the opinion of every officer attached here you would have made a splendid officer. The eagerness with which you have always looked for work to do even when work, due to the circumstances of war was sometimes quite unpleasant, should bring to you a high place in civilian life, and your honesty and integrity should gain for you the respect which all officers here hold you in.

Arthur John Delany.
First Lieutenant of United States Infantry, U. S. Army."

Knowles was given a splendid reception upon his arrival at his home here.

MISS GIRARD A NOTARY PUBLIC

Appointed by Gov. Coolidge and Sworn in by U. S. Commissioner Goodspeed.

Miss Girard Has Been Assisting Draft Board and Working on Income Tax Returns

Miss Delia J. Girard, daughter of Louis Girard, of 91 Bullard street, for several years in the employ of Asa Auger, attorney, has recently been appointed a notary public by Governor Coolidge. She has taken the oath, as required by the statute, before Commissioner Alexander McL. Goodspeed.

Miss Girard has helped filling out the questionnaires on the Legal Advisory Board, Division 1, and is now wearing the button given to all who have spent several nights a week, for that purpose, without pay. She has also been very busy lately with the income tax returns.

Miss Girard is widely known in this city, especially at the North End, as a piano teacher. On several occasions, she substitutes for the regular organist at St. Anthony's church, and is much devoted to religious organizations and entertainments. She graduated from St. Anthony's school, pursued a commercial course at St. Laurent's college, near Montreal, Canada, and obtained a diploma for the same. A typewriter-stenography course was then taken up at Benton's local business college, and she was there awarded a diploma.

For four years, she was a night clerk at Sub-station No. 9, conducted by the Acushnet Pharmacy, where a large business was done in the registry department as well as in the issuance of domestic and international money orders.

Alton S. Worsley, at Bordeaux, Writes of Anxiety of Long-Service Men to Get Back to States.

Alton S. Worsley, attached to a headquarters company of an infantry division, at Bordeaux, has written the following letter to his mother and folks here:

"Just a few lines to let you know I am well and hope everyone at home is the same. Things are about the same here and although the papers read rather funny at times, do not be afraid, as it will not amount to anything, I am sure. I see that President Wilson is on his way over here again and things will be fixed up soon, I am sure. The weather here stays about the same and of course it rained all day yesterday, it being Sunday.

"I am still in hopes of getting home in June or July. President Wilson in his speech at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York said:

"'And so I am going back to my task on the other side with renewed vigor. I hadn't forgotten what the spirit of the American people is, but I have become immensely refreshed by coming in contact with it again. I did not know how good home felt until I got here.'

Alton S. Worsley.

"It is a wonder he didn't think of some of the boys who have been here 16 to 18 and 20 months, and many of them who have been through hell and fire, and some of them have grown gray-headed at the age of 25 or even less. I think he could get the shipping board to release more ships to bring the boys home, instead of cutting down on them each month. I am not speaking for myself in here as I have not been here long (8 months), but I don't think the boys are getting a square deal."

New Bedford Man Went Round World with Kilties' Band

apr 1 1919

Eugene B. LaHaye.

Traveled 55,000 miles on a two-year tour taking in every important city on the globe. That is the record which a man born and brought up in New Bedford has behind him.

Eugene B. La Haye is one of the few musicians who has attained a high degree of proficiency on the bassoon, for that quaint instrument is particularly hard to master. But Mr. La Haye plays it so well that when the manager of the famous "Kilties" band heard him, he engaged him to play with the band on the world-wide tour. The picture in his kilties was taken in Australia.

From the time of his birth on June 25th, 1883 till he was a young man, Mr. La Haye lived in New Bedford; his parents, now living in Rochester, New York, are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. La Haye. As a boy La Haye showed marked musical talent studying under Dr. Gary deN. Hough, then bassoon solist of the New Bedford Orchestral club. He joined the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and at 15 was establishing a fine reputation as a clarinetist with Reiter's National band here. A few years later when the family moved to Rochester, he organized and became chief musician of the first and only Sons of Veterans' orchestra in New York state.

Barnum & Bailey's claimed La Haye's attention next. He traveled with the circus for two seasons, playing the clarinet in the band during the performances and practising on the bassoon at every leisure moment. It was with the tent show that he made the reputation which won him the round-the-world trip.

With other organizations La Haye's fame kept spreading. He played at the Jamestown and Panama-Pacific expositions and accompanying one of the Henry W. Savage musical road shows he saw enough of California to determine to make his permanent home there.

Now Mr. La Haye is bassoon solist at the American theatre in Oakland, California, and is being featured in local newspapers as the "Master of the Bassoon."

Daniel Todd of Canadians Worked for Late H. H. Rogers---Known Here.

Saw Action at Ypres, the Somme and Vimy Ridge.

Private Daniel Todd of Sultz, Saskatchewan, formerly an employe of the late Henry H. Rogers in Fairhaven and veteran of Ypres, the Somme and Vimy Ridge with the Canadian army, is visiting his mother, Mrs. D. A. McLeod in this city. A reception was held the past week when he was presented a watch fob inscribed "1915 Ypres, Somme, Vimy Ridge 1919" by his aunts and uncles and a splendid pocketbook by his cousins. The pocketbook was presented by 11-year-old Catherine McDonald.

Those who attended the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Murdock MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Angus McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. Alton McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. George Melvin, Mrs Jeanette McLeod, Miss Anna McLeod, the Misses Jeanette, Muriel, Alice and Catherine MacDonald, D. P. MacDonald, Miss Jessie Ross, Miss Elsie McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. James Laughlin. The program included musical selections by the Misses Muriel MacDonald and Anna McLeod.

Private Todd was employed by the late H. H. Rogers at Fairhaven and New York 12 years ago. He enlisted at Regina, Saskatchewan, April 1915 and first served in Ypres salient. He was transferred to the Somme in August, 1916, and it was in a charge of his battalion on Sunday morning, August 8 that he was badly wounded, being hit three times in five minutes. Two wounds were caused by shrapnel and another by a rifle bullet which passed through his body, coming out below the shoulder blade. The scars left by the shrapnel are all over his left side and back. The bullet scar is about the diameter of a lead pencil where it entered and about one inch by one and a half inches where it came out. At roll call after the charge to win a section of the German trenches, only 68 answered out of a total of 750.

RED CROSS NURSE TELLS HER STORY

Mrs. Jessie M. Smith, Supt. Instructive Nursing Asso,. Tells War Experiences

Annual Meeting of Association at Home of Mrs. Wing Yesterday Afternoon.

mar 11 1919

Calmly and dispassionately, omitting all harrowing details that certainly must have accompanied a mission such as hers, Mrs. Jessie M. Smith, superintendent of the Instructive Nursing association, told the story of her service over seas with the Red Cross, at the annual meeting of the association at the home of Mrs. Charles F. Wing on Sixth street yesterday afternoon, from the time she embarked at New York, through all the tense excitement of the trip across, her work in the hospitals and among the refugees, until her return home, when, after being lost at sea in a storm for four days, she sighted the Statue of Liberty once more.

Mrs. Jessie M. Smith.

Mrs. Smith was assigned to the Bureau of Refugees in Paris, the sort of work she wanted. Her first call was for hospital service, when a call came for first 100, then increasing until 7,000 beds were called for. This was her first experience with hospital duty, and to her it was a sad, sad experience. Never, said Mrs. Smith, had her hatred for the Boche been so bitter as when she say the ambulances coming in with the brave American boys, the majority suffering from gassing, and some of them dying before they reached the hospital. The hospital was later taken over by two army units, and the Red Cross unit went back to headquarters.

"A Red Cross nurse is like a soldier," explained Mrs. Smith, "and she must be a good soldier. It is not for her to question an order, but to go ahead and obey."

The work among the refugees Mrs. Smith found most interesting, in spite of the many pathetic cases. She told of how the Red Cross went to meet the trains on which the refugees kept pouring in, assisted the weak and sick, and sent them to hospitals or to southern France for protection. At one time the Red Cross examined over 50,000 refugees.

In the evening the Red Cross nurses would go down to the staion to meet the trains of wounded soldiers—the nurses were never too tired to meet the boys. The Red Cross hospital trains, declared the speaker, are most wonderfully equipped, much better than the French. The nurses would bo through the trains light the cigarettes for the boys and write notes for them. In the station, surgeons were operating day and night.

"The French aides at the base hospitals were the bane of my life," continued Mrs. Smith. "We used to talk through an interpreter, but it took so long to try to make them understand hygienic methods." In speaking of the homes in Paris, Mrs. Smith said that she never knew that such conditions could exist. Some of the houses are six stories high, and since the water must be got from a courtyard, there is not going to be much washing done, she said, though Mrs. Smith expressed the belief that an annual affair might possibly be held.

Next Mrs. Smith went south to do baby hygiene work. She was sent to a community of 10,000 people, where the doctor was the only Protestant man in the vicinity and she the only Protestant woman. When she reached there, she found out that what was wanted was a nurse who was Catholic and who could speak French. The conditions here, she said, were appalling. The hospital was an old stone building, moldy and musty, and the different sexes and cases were all housed together.

The splendid co-operation of the Red Cross and the American Fund for French Wounded was praised by the speaker, the organizations uniting and assisting wherever work could be better carried out by co-operation.

Mrs. Smith also paid a tribute to the Y. W. C. A. "I don't know what our American girls would have done over there," she said, "had it not been for the Y. W. C. A. When the girls couldn't get rooms in a hotel, as often happened, they could always get shelter at the 'Y'. Then, too, they could get wholesome food there cheap. I can't say too much for them. The hostess houses do a great deal for the girls and the boys as well. They had plenty of meats and vegetables, and often the men would come there for their meals as well, saying that nowhere else could they get such satisfying food.

The period during which the Big Bertha terrorized Paris was discussed by Mrs. Smith. Every time Big Bertha struck, she said, some one had to be taken.

"You would have been proud of our American boys if you could have seen them in the July 4th parade," said Mrs. Smith, "the most wonderful parade I have ever seen, and in another parade, the last parade I saw in Paris the Sunday after the armistice was signed. The American boys, she said looked straight ahead, neither to the right nor to the left, while the French soldiers stopped to smile, laugh and pick up flowers and money that were thrown at them. For the first time the French government asked women to march, and the Red Cross nurses marched in a body."

After the armistice, Mrs. Smith said, her only desire was to get home, and after securing her release, she sailed, taking sixteen days. The ship was lost at sea, for four days, in the worst storm that the captain, who had been following the sea for 35 years had seen. Nothing could express her joy when she at last saw the Statue of Liberty once more.

Mrs. Smith payed a splendid tribute to her corps of workers in New Bedford, and to Miss Brown who had been acting head in her absence.

Fall River Nurse Was Over There Since 1915 With the French---Six Months With the Americans.

Miss Mary K. Nelson of 573 Osborn street, Fall River, has returned from France the proud possessor of the Distinguished Service Medal. Miss Nelson served for slightly more than six months with the Americans. Miss Nelson spoke recently at the Union M. E. church in Fall River and told her experiences while over there. She served at St. Valery en Caux and Evreux. She left New York in 1915 on the steamer Rechambeau and went to the French government hospitals. She wears gold palms awarded by the French government for meritorious service with that nation's fighting forces and was only six months with an American unit.

Miss Nelson said that the gladness which was in the heart of each and every nurse when the first American doughboys came to the hospital has never been equalled since. Though sorry to see the Yanks wounded, their company more than paid for the trouble they might have been to the nurses. The nurses loved the French, admired the English but adored the Americans. They were bigger in stature than the fighting men of any of the other Allied armies. Miss Nelson saw Kitchener's army on the way to the front and at that time the British Tommy did not have any idea that the war was going to last as long as it did.

Mary K. Nelson.

During the winter, Miss Nelson said, the wounds of the soldiers were terrible. Supplies were few and far between and oftentimes while under the French government there was not enough food for all the men. She returned following the ending of hostilities.

Fred Clarkson Is Guest of British Royalty at Windsor Castle.

Member of Uncle Sam's Navy Also Visits Brother William With Battery D.

Telling how he was entertained by royalty at Windsor castle and shown around the grounds of the palace, Fred Clarkson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Clarkson, 141 Butler street, writes his parents of the wonderful sightseeing trip he has enjoyed during a short furlough granted him by the United States naval authorities. Clarkson has also had the privilege of visiting our own Battery D at their headquarters in France, where he had a reunion with his brother, William, who has been a member of the battery since it left New Bedford in the summer of 1917.

Fred Clarkson.

Clarkson is serving as a member of the crew of the submarine chaser No. 34, having enlisted in the navy in May, 1917. By a singular coincidence, he left New Bedford for Newport on the same day that his brother left for Boxford with Battery D., and both have had many thrilling experiences since they left home to take part in the big fight. For a long time Clarkson was stationed at Plymouth, England, as the base for his vessel, and it was while at this port that the members of the crew were invited to visit Windsor castle. Needless to say, the invitation was accepted, and the party was shown around the castle grounds and later entertained to luncheon by Princess Alice, who proved a delightful and democratic hostess to all the representatives of Uncle Sam's navy who were fortunate in being members of the party.

London is a great city, according to the letters sent home by Seaman Clarkson, and the rest of the furlough was spent in Paris and with Battery D at its camp near Brest, where the boys were all ready and more than anxious for their home coming. Clarkson himself, expects to be home towards the end of April or the early part of May, and is now at Brest, awaiting orders to return by way of Portugal and the Azores.

honors, winning the first prize in a series of events staged by the Fifth Army Corps Horseshow, and also winning first honors in the competitive concert by bands held at Nogent-En-Bassigny. The band afterwards was engaged to give a series of concerts at the big hotels in Paris. Sergeant Sherman gives the following account of the 82d since he joined the division:

The 82nd division contained a pick of 8,000 New England soldiers sent from Camp Devens to Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., and there they joined the national army of Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee, being about one-fifth of them New England soldiers.

This army was trained at Atlanta, at Camp Gordon, being at the time it went across, well equipped for the front.

Headquarters arrived in France about May 17, 1918. When it went to France it had more than 6,000 of these men sprinkled throughout the division with equal quotas of men from other northern camps.

Relieved 26th Division.

Our division gave its first service when it relieved the 26th division in the Toul sector last June. From that time until the armistice was signed it was in action about all the time.

It remained in Toul until August; [illegible] was then shifted for the great St. Mi[illegible] fel battle, occupying the extrem[illegible] right of the line at Pout-a-Mousso[illegible] and vicinity. Here again it was clos[illegible] to the 26th division, which was th[illegible] southern jaw of the pinchers.

The 82nd then moved to the Verdu[illegible] front, where it remained, fighting [illegible] the Argonne forests and in the ad[illegible] vance which continued steadily unt[illegible] hostilities ended.

In all the division experienced about five months' fighting. All musical instruments were laid aside while the bandsmen carried on with the glorious 82nd, in the great drive of the war.

It has been a cruel war and the people in God's country never will know what the boys over there have been through but I was glad to [illegible] there and do my bit. I wouldn't [illegible] to tell my experiences because if one I started I would never finish. [illegible] have been through enough and G[illegible] America is the only peaceful place [illegible] the world.

After the armistice was signed [illegible] we were relieved from the front [illegible] division staged a great show, nam[illegible] ly Toot Sweet Musical comedy, play[illegible] ing the cities and towns of France. Our band is furnishing the music with an orchestra.

The Toot Sweet Musical Comedy company, 82nd division cast, is made up of professional actors, who have seen service with the 82nd division at St. Mihiel and in the Argonne.

I want to speak a good word for the Salvation Army, who have done a noble part in the war. They were so kind to us boys when we were at the front, bringing food and drinks. They are a wonderful people and well all praise.

THREE BROTHERS WHO SERVED THROUGHOUT WAR

July 19 1919

JOHN, EDWARD AND DANIEL McELENY.

John J. McEleny, Edward H. McEleny and Daniel A. McEleny, grandsons of Daniel McEleny, a late Civil war veteran contributed their bit towards the winning of the war by serving in the United States army as soldiers, some overseas and some on this side in coast defense forts. John was on the S. S. Persic when she was torpedoed on September 7th. He served with the 87th division and saw much active service. The torpedo which sank the Persic fort nately struck upwards on the boat and missed the engine room by quite a distance thanks to the handling of the ship by the captain who saw the tell-tale white streak of a torpedo before the missle hit her mark.

English destroyers saved the men but much of their valuables were forever lost. Edward was a supply sergeant at Fort Wetherill in the C. A. C. Daniel who resides in Oakland, California and formerly was a vaudeville actor on the Keith circuit enlisted in the aviation and was at Kelly Field, Texas. He too was a sergeant in the baloon department later being transferred to Fort Sill, Oklahoma. The brothers are planning a reunion when the war is again a thing of the past and they have all been discharged from the service.

GENERAL COLE HERE TODAY

apr 28-1919

Brigade Commander of 26th Division to Speak at High School Tonight.

Brigadier General Charles H. Cole, commander of the 52nd infantry brigade of the 26th division, will reach New Bedford this afternoon at 4 25 o'clock. He will be met at the station by Mayor Ashley and Oliver Prescott, together with the military escort, and the visitor will be taken to the Wamsutta club. From there General Cole goes to the Parker House, where there will be a reception from 5 30 to 6 o'clock, followed by a banquet for members of the Board of Commerce, under whose auspices the general comes to the city. The dinner will be at 6 15 o'clock.

General Charles H. Cole.

At the High school auditorium there will be a musical program from 7 30 to 8 15 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the High school meeting, and especially this invitation is to relatives of the men who served in the 26th division. General Cole speaks at 8 15 o'clock. The general spoke in the Strand theatre in Providence Sunday afternoon, when there was no room enough in the theatre to accommodate those who desired to hear the speaker. No admission ticket is required for the High school meeting.

John Bottemley Home With Three Service Stripes

march 16-1919

John Bottemley.

John Bottemley of 248 Eugenia street is back home with three service bars, designating 18 months' service with the expeditionary forces. Bottemley arrived at Newport News, Va., a week ago, passenger on the Kroonland.

Bottemley, a member of the 7th C. A. C., enlisted here in May, 1917, and arrived in France August 6. He served on the Verdun and St. Mihiel front. Bottemley is a member of the St. [illegible] ambulance guards.

FATHER CONATY HOME FROM WAR

1/17 1919

Catholic Priest of Taunton Won War Cross and Has Two Wound Stripes.

Chaplain Crawled Out On No-Man's Land and Brought Back Wounded.

New York, Feb. 27.—The transport Wilhelmina arrived here today with 4,496 soldiers. The Wilhelmina brought 83 officers and 1370 enlisted men from convalescent camps at Bordeaux, Company M, 345th infantry, evacuation ambulance company No. 80, and several medical and casual units.

Chaplain Charles C. Conaty.

Among the passengers on the Wilhelmina, which was six days overdue, was Chaplain Charles C. Conaty, a Catholic priest of Taunton, Mass. He had a French war cross and two wound stripes.

Describing the event which won him the decoration, he said:

"A detachment of our boys while in a cemetery were cut off by the attacking Germans on July 18, and they were forced to retire under heavy shell fire and leave their wounded behind. I was in charge of a small squad that night and we crawled out into No Man's Land and succeeded in bringing all the wounded back to safety."

Father Conaty was wounded in the fighting around Chateau Thierry and gassed in the Argonne offensive.

Fr. Charles C. Conaty before extending his services as chaplain was curate at the St. James's Catholic church. He enlisted a few months after the outbreak of war and completed his course at the Chaplains' Training school at Fort Munroe, and was then stationed at Camp Hancock, Georgia, before sailing for France.

He was ordained to the priesthood September 14, 1915, by Bishop Feehan of Fall River. He is a native of Taunton, and after attending the public schools there entered La Salle academy at Providence. Later he attended Holy Cross, from which he received his degree of A. B.

WILL GRADUATE FROM WEST POINT

June 25 1919

George W. Lewis of This City a Member of the 1921 Class.

Has Already Received His Commission in the Regular Army.

George W. Lewis, son of Dr. George F. Lewis, is among the 29 New England graduates of the United States military academy at West Point this week. He is a member of the class of 1921, which is two years ahead of the usual schedule. Lieutenant Lewis ranked 102 in a class of 277.

Lieut. George W. Lewis.

Lieutenant Lewis was graduated from the New Bedford High school with the class of 1914, after he had established an enviable record in all departments of school activities. He was a member of the cadets, and served as captain of the football team, with whom he played a stellar game at right end. He also played with the baseball team, and was one of the stars of the nine.

Wilbor in U. S. After a Year's Army Service

June 25 1919

Walter C. Wilbor.

First Class Private Walter C. Wilbor of Co. C. 315th Ammunition Train, 90th division, arrived Sunday from overseas on the transport Edgar Luckenbach, and is at Camp Devens. He is expected home on a short furlough. He has served one year in France and Germany. Wilbor is the son of Mrs. Herbert C. Wilbor, 745 County street.

Colonel Louis V. Greer of Dallas, Tex., commander of the 315th Ammunition Train, was in charge of the troops of the transport. His regiment was originally composed of Oklahoma and Texas drafted men, but before they left for France, their ranks were filled at Camp Mills, L. I., with over 150 men drawn from New England. The Massachusetts contingent had been trained at Wentworth Institute.

The regiment saw service with the division on the St. Mihiel front and the Meuse-Argonne offensive, and also shares with the larger unit the honor of citation by General Pershing and Lieutenant General Liggett, commander of the army of occupation. The motor battalion of the regiment, commanded by Major A. C. Kennedy, San Antonio, Tex., has a record of only one desertion, no stragglers and no deaths from sickness since its formation in September, 1917. Commanding the horse battalion is Major John A. Inman, a regular army officer.

army nursing staff, wrote the following letter to her brother in this city from France recently:

"Dear Brother:

"Today I am thinking of many things and of home and all of you. Today was Nellie's birthday and poor little thing I imagine she is much better off but I do miss her. The weather has cleared up a good bit and spring in France will not be so bad. Yesterday I visited Domremy, the birthplace of Joan of Arc. It was a wonderful trip and we went in an ambulance as far as Neuchateau. We went into the very house where she was born and to the church where she attended also.

"There is a wonderful cathedral dedicated to her and it is very beautiful. We are pretty busy now but do not have any more of the 26th boys as they have moved on to Le Mans. Later they will go to an embarkation port. Did I ever tell you about the trip coming over? We were on a fast ship coming over and were not convoyed. We landed safely and I thank God for that. France has lost four million men and you see what a great work her women have been called upon to do since they made the great sacrifice. Hope to hear from you shortly. Anne."

Dear Mother:

Moved again but only a very short distance this time. Feeling tip-top with plenty doing and enough to eat. It gets dark about 5 o'clock and I wrap up in my blankets and go to bed.

The way things look now I will not go back to my company again but will be transferred to another one. By the transfer I lose my sergeant's stripes and fall back to a corporal again. If by any chance I do rejoin my old company again I will regain the sergeant's stripes that I shed now. It won't be long before troops start back from here, but of course I can't tell whether I will be one of the lucky first to go or not. It doesn't make much difference anyway so long as I as safe and sound.

Your loving son, company, little dreaming that he had won a commission and the letter from the war department came as a complete surprise.

Sergeant Foley was a member of the "Old Fourth" since 1913. He followed Captain Stitt's command to Fort Banks, and then to France. He is 29 years old and is a son of James J. Foley.

Former Captain of Battery D Now Promoted to Major

3/29-1919

Roger D. Swain.

A telegram received here tells of the promotion of Roger D. Swaim to the rank of major of artillery. Major Swaim helped to organize Battery D of the 102nd F. A. and was in command of the outfit when it went overseas. He was later detached and sent to an officers' training school and saw service with various outfits before finally assuming command of the battalion of which Battery D is a unit.

Charles Vohnoutka Tells of Sights in Austria, Italy, Spain and France While Over There.

mar 30-1919

Charles Vohnoutka, a member of the naval forces of this country, writing from Gibraltar to his mother tells the following interesting story of his experiences:

"Dear Mother:—I received a letter from you yesterday and was glad to hear that you were all O. K. As for myself I never felt better in my life. Had a little luck this last trip for no storm struck us until late the last day out. We were in sight of the Rock of Gibraltar when the storm came up in ten minutes and believe me it was a dandy while it lasted. We were all glad that in stopped at Messina recently and went a few hours we would be in safe shelter.

"I've already told you of the Austrian battleships I was on at Corfu, and of my trip to Dalmatia. We ashore. We saw Mt. Etna last summer and that old mountain is always smoking. Took a trip to Rome some time ago and visited all the important places—The Vatican, Forum, Coliseum, St. Peter's and St. Paul's cathedral, and other places of similar importance.

"While in France I met Jimmy Kane and Jean Bebeau, two New Bedford soldiers, with whom I used to go around with before the war broke out. We had one fine time together and they were both in fine health. We expect to arrive home either the latter part of April or the first of May. From France we go to Madiera and then to the Bermudas and hit the states after that. It is too rough out on the deep blue for the little chasers to go out now, and we must wait for calmer weather. I remain as ever, your Charles."

DONTH KILLED IN ACTION NEWS RECEIVED HERE

May 16-1919 March

North End Soldier Was Previously Announced "Missing in Action."

FIRST GERMAN FROM HERE TO GIVE LIFE

Cause and Date of Death Yet to Be Learned---Enlisted at New Haven.

Previously announced "missing in action", Robert U. Donth was last night reported dead, cause and date of death to be determined. The telegram was received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Donth of 179 Dean street. Donth was reported

Robert U. Donth.

"missing in action" July 23 and since that date no word has been received here from him.

Although of German parentage, Donth was a native of this city. He enlisted at New Haven while employed at a machine shop there, a few days after war was declared. He sailed from Camp Merritt, November 5, 1917, a member of a machine gun battalion. Donth was 30 years old and a graduate of the H. M. Knowlton school. He was also a member of the local aerie of Eagles. Besides his parents, two sisters and three brothers survive.

PARADE CLOSED THE CELEBRATION

Thousands of People in Attendance Yesterday at Santo Christo Exercises---Fr. Taveira at Final Mass.

A street parade in which two bands and several societies took part brought to a conclusion yesterday afternoon the celebration of the feast of Santo Christo by the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Large crowds lined the streets in the vicinity of the church to witness the events. More than 200 little girls costumed all in white, composed the main body of the procession, while the various men's societies of the church, over 150 strong, brought up the rear, and served as a guard for the image of Santo Christo.

SALVATION ARMY DOES FINE WORK

apr 16-1919

Billy Kirschbaum of This City Praises the Workers and Results at His Cantonment in France.

In a letter to a friend in this city received recently, William Kirschbaum, states that the Salvation Army has been doing great work for the boys at his training camp. He is served with cake, pie, doughnuts and chocolate every day and in the evening they run a song or entertainment program for the boys. There are four women and one man connected with the workers at the particular camp where Kirschbaum is located and they have done fine work, the local boy declares.

He is sending home two German helmets, one a steel pointed helmet, worn only on dress parade, and one a steel topped hat for use in the trenches.

Saw Action in Battle as Member of Famous "Buffaloes"

mar 28 1919

John J. Fernandes.

John J. Fernandes of 234 Acushnet avenue, a member of Co. L, 367th regiment, known as the "Buffaloes," is back home again and has already been tendered two parties and a dance by his friends. He says that army life is a pretty tough proposition, but he certainly looks none the worse for his experience, part of which came right on the firing line as an infantryman. Fernandes fought ten days in the Champagne sector, six days in the Argonne forest and five days at Metz.

He is a New Bedford boy, although just before entering the service, he was employed as a cook in Worcester. He was called by division four and left here April 27 of last year.

Since his arrival, a party and dance have been held at his home and a surprise party was given at the home of his cousin, Alfred Fernandes, who, with Mrs. Fernandes, prepared quite a spread for the gathering. A dinner was served, there were musical numbers of John S. Fernandes, pianist, and Fernando Jesus, violinist, and the soldier was presented $24 in one dollar bills, representing his age. His birthday came while he was in France and the party was held to commemorate that occasion.

TWO YEARS WITH THE CANADIANS

Ivan Dickinson Enlisted in Mounted Rifles at Age of Eighteen.

Wears Belgian Medal for Participation in Recapture of City of Mons.

After serving almost two years in the army with the 5th battalion of the Canadian Mounted Rifles in France, Ivan Dickinson arrived during the past week at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dickinson, 1649 Acushnet avenue, and is receiving the congratulations of his many friends on coming practically unscathed through his many engagements on the other side.

Dickinson joined up with the Canadians for the simple reason that he was under age for the U. S. army, being only eighteen years of age at the time he threw in his lot with the allied cause. Dickinson was anxious to be in the "big fight," and passed the authorities as a nineteen year old soldier without much difficulty, after enlisting at the Washington club during the spirited drive for recruits in this city in 1917. Following a brief spell of training in Canada, he was sent over to England, and along with thousands of other New Englanders, completed his course at Bramshott Camp, Hampshire. The allies were calling for men and more men in those days, and the Mounted Rifles were soon sent across the channel to help fill the gap and stem the advance of the Germans in the march on Paris.

That the Canadians managed to do their bit in the extremely heavy fighting along the Cambrai front, at Valenciennes, St. Quentin and Arras is confirmed by the fact that but 185 members of the 4th Mounted Rifles reported back to their commanding officer out of over 800 strong when they went into the fray.

Apart from being gassed slightly in an engagement around Arras, young Dickinson went through the various battle without injury, and is the proud possessor of the Belgian medal for taking part in the capture of Mons, presented by the Belgian government to those who took part in the recapture of the city. Two blue stripes on the right sleeve of his tunic signifies two years of service, while on the left shoulder he wears a red badge significant of the regimental colors, with a bluish gray badge beneath to show that he participated in the historic engagements at Vimy Ridge.

Dickinson and his regiment spent Christmas day in the castle which was the headquarters of the Duke of Wellington on the battlefield of Waterloo, was given a furlough in England after the armistice was signed, leaving France on January 5, and sailing from Liverpool for Halifax on March 7. From the latter port his regiment was sent to Montreal, and Dickinson reached New Bedford and home during the past week, hoping to receive his final discharge from the service within the next few days. And the lad is not yet twenty years of age.

CORP. SAMUELSON IN RHINELAND

May 30 1919

Local Soldier Writes of People and Customs on the Other Side of the River Rhine.

Corporal Joseph Samuelson of Battery D, 10th field artillery, wrote the following letter to a relative in this city from Germany, where he is stationed with the army of occupation:

"Dear Aunt Annie—Just received your letter of February 12 today (February 28th), and that is sure speeding the mail up quite a bit. I was glad to hear that you had received the little scenes along the Rhine. They are only views, but they will serve to give you an idea of what the country around here looks like. This wouldn't be so bad a country to spend a year or two, but the people—they are so ignorant and their customs are intolerable.

"They are more than 100 years behind the times. I suppose when I get back in 1985 such things as receptions for soldiers will be things of the past. The Jewish Welfare Board has a large hall in Coblenz and only last week they secured passes for all the Jewish boys to go to Andmart for religious services. We had supper and entertainment and enjoyed ourselves immensely. Well, as I just came off guard duty and was handed a letter by the mail clerk I thought I would answer at once, so you will get an early reply. Will close now, as I am quite tired out. Will await your answer with interest. Yours with love. "Joe."

TELLS OF HIS HOSPITAL WORK

apr 16 - 1919

Chester S. Howland Attached to Base Hospital at Bordeaux.

Saw Horrible Sights While Working in War Area Near the Marne.

The following letter was recently received from Chester S. Howland on duty with a hospital unit over there:

Base Hospital 208,
Bordeaux, France.

"Say, Howland, you've been assigned, and I'll let you know later on more about your orders. They'll be along in a day or two." That's the way the adjutant of the United States

Chester S. Howland.

X-Ray School in Paris addressed me one morning last May when the German forces were making such breeches in the Allied lines just between Soissons and Rheims. They were on their way to Chateau Thierry and Paris, being shelled by big "Bertha" and raided nearly every night, was beginning to show signs of fear. Many residents has left their Paris homes for cities much farther south.

The next day I think I was told to report to Lieutenant ——. He, too, was at the school in the officers' class waiting orders. The United States had purchased a large amount of X-Ray equipment from the French. This apparatus, with some surgical equipment, was to form what was known as Mobile Surgical Units. In our own experience, the surgical portion was very little used because wherever we moved there was always sufficient to cary on from four to ten operating tables. The lieutenant and and looked everything over to see if nad loked everything over to see if all was as it should be. It was all very nicely packed and indexed, and every case was locked. The French are very careful in some things. I remember I told the lieutenant, "This is the only time we ever find everything as it is supposed to be."

June the 3d we received orders to report with our equipment to the division surgeon of the Second division. They were preparing to re-enforce the French lines and stop, if possible, the German drive. Anyone that is a subjective student of psychology knows just how I felt. I surely did hustle that day, I was a little bit excited for I was soon to be bound toward the front. That noon I went for my dinner but I was too impatient to wait. As I was coming out of the mess hall on the Champs Elysee I met and thanked a chap that had spoken a word of encouragement to me a day or two before while I was reading my Bible. He was not supposed to be a Christian man.

Then I hustled back to the truck on which our boxes and big tent had been packed. I had a pair of pants and a shirt soaking that morning and they dried out just in time for me to tuck them in my barracks bag just before we left. That was the last thing to go on, I think, and then I crawled up on the seat. It was then, or just a little before that one of the lieutenants handed me a letter from home, written Mother's day. It was full of good news, and gave me a light heart to begin my adventure in very active service.

You will recall the site of the first battle of the Marne. It was in the vicinity of this that a field hospital had been set up, a few miles more distant from Paris. It was dark when we arrived, naturally, for it was about 11 p. m. We drove our truck under the trees to camouflage it. That night the Hun planes visited us and dropped a few bombs, but not very near us. We set up our equipment here for the first time. We were, by the way, one of the first X-Ray teams of this mobile variety to be used in our army. In this place I saw my first wounded. They were brought directly from the first aid stations at the very front. The thoughts produced by the scene of trucks and ambulances bringing in wounded until they covered the ground all around our tents near a little chateau I cannot write to you about just now, for I've never quite colelcted them into any sort of form. Dirty, bloody and ghastly, shattered jaws, fractured skulls, torn abdomens, sickening chest wounds that gurgle with every breath; unconscious boys with big bulging, bloodshot eyes. This is the type I've mostly seen while with field hospitals, for we administered to the most seriously wounded.

The Second Division moved back from the Chateau-Thierry front, and we remained (the lieutenant and I and our X-ray apparatus) to assist the Twenty-sixth division. I'll never forget those days and nights. I was on duty subject to call nearly all the time. Many pieces of German shell and machine gun we localized for the surgical team, working day and nights while the drive of that particular division was on. It was at this place that we made our little X-Ray room within the big tent from blankets. How we used to swelter in that dusty black room and listen to the men tell their tales while we searched for steel and lead. I remember one case with abdominal wounds, a German lieutenant colonel. A fine, young, beautiful specimen of manhood. He made us understand a little concerning his sweetheart to whom he was to be married. I felt a bit sympathetic, and was a little might sorrowful to learn the next day or so that he had died.

I often thought of the dear ones at home as I saw our boys lying on their cots and stretchers so badly torn. Many parents and loved ones, I know, were wondering where their boys were.

I guess this will do for this time. Perhaps later I'll tell you a little about our being shelled and bombed.

I close, thanking God for his wonderful watch, care and protection. He has blessed me more than I realize. Pray he may continue to keep me for home and its influences are still far away.

Chester S. Howland

dress was read by Adeline Audette and the young sailor was presented a check by Mrs. Emile Belque. Plamondon was stationed at Newport and New London for a time, and was aboard a submarine chaser which was sunk while on her way to France. He stopped at Bermuda, Spain and Portugal during his wanderings with the sub chasers and touched at nearly all of the larger Mediterranean ports. Among those present to honor the returned tar were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ethier, Mrs. Delina Plamondon, Mr. and Mrs. O. Chapdelaine, Mr. and Mrs. S. Santerre, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Belque, Mr. and Mrs. L. Boulais, Mr. and Mrs. Galipeault, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Ethier, Charles Ethier, Miss Delima Sawyer, Mrs. J. Paquette, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Savoie, Miss N. Nadeau, Miss Adeline Audette, Miss Dolores Audette, Miss Alice Audette, Donat Audette, Loretta Paradis, Mrs. Bartgis, Miss Frennette of Taunton.

WAS ON DUTY IN NO MAN'S LAND

Henry Viera Had Thrilling Time Amid Dead Huns and the Flares Which the Germans Sent Up.

apr 16 1919

Miss Lillian Viera of 20 Rotch street received the following letter from her brother, Henry Viera, in France with the 77th field artillery of the army of occupation:

Dear Lil:—Your letter received and in return will try to describe some of the happenings over here. A drive we were in commenced near the town of Esnes in the latter part of September and for miles one could see the flashes of the cannon and hear the short snappy bark of the French 75s. The heavier booming of the bigger guns too was distinctly audible. The German positions were literally blown to pieces and Hill 304 and Death Valley which the Germans claimed were impregnable were taken by our men in the morning.

From this on the Germans slowly retreated to the Meuse and there they made some desperate attempts to stop the Americans. We took everything the Dutchmen had and more than once I didn't expect to get back with a whole hide. Another man and I were stationed about a mile in advance of the artillery lines. Our observation post was an enlarged shell hole and the work consisted of watching for any suspicious signals from the Germans. In case they were seen we were to signal back to the battery watching us. If the signal was understood or rather to make sure of that one of us ran back and reported.

One night I was sent back after reporting to observation post duty again. It was so dark that I lost my way. I was about to retrace my steps when a flare went up from their lines and I foolishly moved to see if I could find the shell hole. The next moment three shots went perilously close to my head. I admit I was some scared for a minute. I landed in a shell hole which was nearby and was full of mud and water.

Right near there I saw a boot. I was afraid for a long time. I figured that where there was a boot there should be something in it. A flare went up shortly after that and I saw it was a dead German whose body I had seen the previous day near the post. That served to show me the right way to my observation post. Some of the Hun planes flew so close that we didn't dare to leave the holes for fear of being shot by, th[illegible] was on the H[illegible]

I saw German atrocities over here in the nature of attacks on observation balloons, men trying to escape from balloons shot down from above were shot as they swayed through the air in parachutes. Will write more later. With love, Henry.

LT. COLONEL IS ASSIGNED HERE

J. M. Pruyn in Charge of Recruiting in This Vicinity.

apr 3 1919

Will Mean Enlargement of Personnel in the Local Office.

New Bedford went on the army recruiting map strong today when Lieutenant Colonel J. M. Pruyn, lately of the 85th infantry, U. S. A., assumed charge of the offices in the Duff building. It is the first time that an officer of this rank has been assigned to this city, and Colonel Pruyn will have under his direct charge the recruiting work in New Bedford, Taunton and Brockton. Colonel A. D. Raymond, who is in charge of the entire district, has his headquarters in Providence. The whole district includes Taunton, Brockton, Providence, Woonsocket, Fall River, New Bedford and adjacent towns to these cities. The establishment of a lieutenant colonel here means considerable enlargement of the office personnel in this city, and this will be accomplished as occasion requires in the immediate future.

Lieut. Col. J. M. Pruyn.

RYAN DESCRIBES NAVAL RAID

feb 9 1919

Appearance of the American Sailors at Durrazzo Caused Austrians to Hoist Flag of Truce.

How the American bluejackets covered themselves with glory during the raid of the Austrian naval base at Durrazzo, is vividly described in a recent letter received here from Joseph C. Ryan of Columbia street. Ryan is aboard one of the 110 footers that has been doing patrol work in the Adriatic. His boat has been officially credited with two submarines and the whole detachment accounted for 24.

The raid on Durrazzo was the first time that American ships have fought in the Adriatic. The American chasers and Allied destroyers went ahead in fan-shaped formation on the look-out for submarines, while airplanes which accompanied the expedition kept a sharp watch from the air. When they reached the edge of the mine field, the chasers were given the task of steaming ahead to explore and mark safe passages for the larger craft with flags fixed on small floats. The work was rendered perilous by the heavy sea.

Throughout the whole operation, fearlessly picking their way between sunken mines, the small American vessels kept steadily on their way until they had crossed the whole of the danger zone. Then the remainder of the fleet entered the mine field following in the track of the American chasers.

The Austrian coast batteries opened fire. Increasing their speed they got through the mine field unscathed, and immediately fell into battle formation and began to bombard the land defenses. The chasers and the Allied destroyers were ordered to proceed straight into the harbor and attack the shipping there. They covered themselves with glory, sinking two destroyers, one torpedo boat, a number of submarines and a quantity of small craft lying in the harbor. Two large and three small steamers were also sunk, one being recognized as a hospital ship was allowed to proceed.

The attack started at 11 o'clock in the morning, and at 12:30 the ships threaded their way back again through the marked passage in the mine field, leaving behind nothing but a heap of smoking [illegible] and the port a cemetery of s[illegible]

SAW FIERCE STRUGGLES OF WAR

—Courtesy of the Fall River News.

DR. P. E. TRUESDALE AND FRENCH CAMION.

DR. TRUESDALE DISCHARGED

Fall River Physician, Member of Yale Unit, Leaves After 18 Months Service

First Undertaking Was Caring for 26th Wounded at Apremont.

Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale of Fall River, discharged from army service after 18 months with an American ambulance unit, has resumed his practise. He attained the rank of major and saw considerable battle action in France.

He was identified with the Yale hospital unit, which later was known as Base Hospital 39, and afterward as Mobile Hospital 39. Dr. Truesdale was at the head of a surgical team in this unit. The Yale unit left this country in August, 1917, landing at Liverpool. From there it went to Southampton and then to France. The unit expected to go direct to the front, but instead it went to Limoges, a city of 80,000 people, and best known for its manufacture of pottery.

The reason the unit did not go directly to the front was because the American troops had not yet entered the fighting line and the French did not appear to take to the idea of having a hospital organization with an entirely English speaking personnel care for the French wounded, except under the most pressing circumstances, which did not exist then. Besides, in the tables of organization of the American army, there were field and evacuation hospitals, but then there were no mobile hospitals.

At Limoges this unit took care of the sick from the American divisions arriving in the autumn and winter of 1917. The Haviland factory, which had been formerly used for the manufacture of china, was taken over. Limoges was to become a base hospital center and the unit, co-operating with the engineers, planned three other hospitals with a total bed capacity of about 15,000. These hospitals were ready in the summer of 1918 and served an urgent need in caring for the large number of wounded soldiers from the second Marne offensive in July.

Of his experiences, Dr. Truesdale said, in part:

Our organization as Mobile hospital 39, left for the American front April 5, 1918, arriving in time to take care of the wounded from the 26th Division in the battle of Apremont. Shortly after followed the battles of Seicheprey and Xivray. These were not of large proportions, being executed by the 26th Division, but they demonstrated to all Europe the mettle of the American soldier.

French officers appeared to be surprised, delighted and hopeful in view of what the Americans had done, and the Germans, who came across as prisoners, freely declared their anxiety about the coming battles with the Americans, but they trusted in the submarines to limit the number of American troops to a few hundred thousands at the outside.

Their confidence in this respect was manifested on one occasion by a wounded German officer, who was being carried to a dressing station by two American stretcher bearers. He could talk English and had been a listener to the conversation between the two Americans. In the course of the journey he said, 'You Americans think you are going to win this war, but you're not.' One doughboy replied, 'You think you're going to the hospital, but you're not.' And suiting action to their word, they dumped him out right there. What happened after that may be left to the imagination.

Yet the anxiety of the French was considerable, for they realized that only superhuman efforts would turn the tide of war. This was particularly true after their own line gave way at Chemin-des-Dames, a sector in which I had served for a time in October, 1917, in an advance post surgical hospital. The French generally considered this sector as very securely held by them, especially as they were in possession of Fort Malmaison, which dominated the German line.

In the latter part of June, 1918, a French officer, high in command, made this remark before a group of American officer: "The fate of Europe depends on what America can do in the next few months."

The following month, uJly, America by her untold sacrifices, proved that her troops, brigaded with the French, British and Italians, would leave the outcome of the war no longer in doubt. From that time on, to Nov. 11, the movement of the Allied troops was always in one direction—forward.

The Germans were first surprised, later bewildered and finally demoralized by the new fighting zeal of her opponents. Americans had come in to bring about the last phases of the war and the doughboys were determined to live up to their placards, which they carried on many occasions in their march to the trenches." "Heaven, Hell or Hoboken by Chirstmas."

HOW THE MEDICAL MEN FOLLOW THE FIGHTER

1/12-1919

Private Milton C. Devoll Recounts Experiences in France Up to Armistice—Yankee Troops Never Seemed to Stop Once They Got Underway.

The following letter, written by Milton C. Devoll, 549 County street, is the first one written by him after the censorship was lifted, and tells for the first time his location in France.

Devoll was inducted into service May 26, 1918, from division three, and later assigned to the medical detachment of the 54th Pioneer infantry which was made a part of the third army of occupation in November.

On Active Service With the American Expitionary Forces, November 29, 1918, Jametz, France.

Dear Dad: I don't know how many of these letters written within the last en days will arrive the same day, but ze expect to move on again soon and think I had better write while the opportunity presents itself.

Milton C. Devoll.

The censorship has slackened a little and I am enclosing a rather censored schedule of my doings, since arriving here. Of course there are lots of things which happened in each of the places which will be interesting to you folks, but I will have to save something until I get back.

As you will see by the schedule, we did not go to a "training camp in some beautiful spot in southern France." In fact, we got down to business about as soon as possible. I did not give you any idea of what we were doing or where we were as it was barred by the censorship and then there was less for you to worry about. Now, of course, it is all over and the fact that we were kicking Heinie's shells a good deal don't cause any worry. We were very fortunate, though, none of the company getting hit, although some of the engineers among us got a few shrapnel wounds.

Personally I have had quite a little doing the last three days. I suppose, first of all, you are wondering how I spent my Thanksgiving day and what I had for excitement.

To go back a day or two. On Tuesday I went down to headquarters with some reports, and on account of the distance, had to stay all night. The next morning we started out and had to go around by Consevoy to find one of our men who left the day before and hadn't returned. He never did get to Consevoy; he hopped a truck and traveled about sixty kilos in the wrong direction. At Consevoy we were told that a messenger had been struck by a truck the preceding night and carried to the hospital at Verdun. We thought that was our man so we set out for Verdun. We didn't locate him, although there was a man brought in by the same last name, but he was a sergeant instead of a private. Well, we started back through mud and rain, and about half way back got a blow-out. The driver fixed that and in the meantime a string of traffic came by and we stayed in that jam almost an hour. We stopped at Consevoy and got a couple of sandwiches from the kitchen and then started for headquarters. Hadn't been on the road five minutes before we had another flat tire, but we had no more inner tubes, so had to run in on it flat. We reached headquarters about 4 p. m., tired and covered with mud. As we could go no farther that day, we stayed over another night there.

The next morning, Thanksgiving day, we started out again and made the rounds of all the companies, covering about 50 or 60 kilos, and then started for Virton, in Belgium, as there were some reports to go there. We arrived about noon and had dinner at the Hotel du Cheveau Blanc (White Horse Hotel) and although the dinner was a simple one, it certainly did taste good. It consisted of three courses—soup, which was fine; meat, gravy and mashed potatoes, and dessert, all of which was fine. We paid five francs ($1.00) apiece for that and it certainly was worth it. I bought a package of "roots" and paid four francs ($.80) for 20, or four cents apiece, which is going some.

As to the town, it was quite a place, I imagine, as these towns go, full of little shops, narrow alleys, no sidewalks, etc. It is not shot up at all, in fact the last of the Germans left only a week ago last Monday. About every house we passed after crossing the Belgian frontier was flying their flag and about one out of every three had an American flag in addition. I say "American flag," but I don't think there were very many made correctly. Some that I saw that looked queer to me had only seven or eight stripes and from 10 to 14 stars. However they were the "Stars and Stripes," and the Belgians have a warm place for those.

During the afternoon there was a parade. It was headed by a few old troops in dress uniform; then came the civilian band; next the town officers, I imagine, wearing frock coats and plug hats; then the women folks all carrying umbrellas, the first I have seen for months (both umbrellas and collection of women); and then came the small boys, each carrying either a Belgian or American flag, and all shouting "Vive l'Amerique." These were followed by all the little girls in town also carrying flags. One thing I noticed particularly, the absence of fellows from 20—yes, even from 15 to 30 or so. I don't believe there were more than a dozen in all, and this parade represented the civil population of the town.

After the parade we began to look around for our ambulance, but—no ambulance showed up. We went to the station and the driver said he couldn't fix the last blow-out in time to get back that night and wanted to stay over. One of the officers told him he had got to get back, so we started finally just about dusk. That certainly was some rough ride, over rough roads, with no lights and I had been in that car all that day and the day before. I personally would have liked to stop going and hang up with the first of our outfits we came to, but we went on a little farther and then gave it up for the night. You can believe I slept some that night. We started on the last lap at daylight this morning and got to my outfit for breakfast.

I might add that I have roamed enough for a while and I guess my next move will be with the outfit, which I expect will be soon.

Of course I have had no mail yet from the states written since the armistice was signed, as it takes nearly a month to get to us, but I certainly am anxious to hear how you people view the thing. I wish they would settle it up as quickly as possible now, so that we could go home, but there are a bunch of us here, and suppose all will have to wait their turn.

If I can only keep well and get back by the first of May I guess I'll be satisfied. That looks like a long time, but if we get somewhere where there is something going on, it will pass fairly quickly.

Tuesday I received some mail and I guess everything is running along about the same at home.

December 5.

Since writing from Jametz we have moved to Rehon, which is a small town about a half mile from Longuay, up near the borders of Belgium and Luxemburg, but in France. It was about twenty two miles from Pametz and took us two days to make it. The first night we laid over in Longuyon and billeted in some German barracks, and the next day same on the rest of the way. In the enclosure were about twenty barracks, all made of concrete and accommodating about three hundred men each, and in addition smaller rooms at the end for the officers. Needless to say they showed the characteristic thoroughness displayed in all other German construction that I have seen.

We are billeted here very comfortably and have the whole battalion here. Personally I live in the Infirmary. We have two rooms, the front one in which we hold our sick calls, keep drugs, etc., and the near room fixed up with a stove and two cots, one of wich I occupy and the other for the man who is on duty here nights. You see if we have a case which needs constant attention we can bring him in here, and if we can't fix him up here send him to a hospital.

The folks here stayed during the years of German occupation, and I guess from their attitude they were glad they to have the Allied troops come in. At least we can have most anything there is if we can make ourselves understood. Today I went out and dug up an egg. Had quite a time making madame understand that I wanted it boiltd, but finally she got me, pulled out a chair for me to set in while she boiled the egg, and when it was ready I literally gobbled it down, the first one I have ever seen since I got here. Shall make another trip there tomorrow and see if those hens have laid another egg by that time.

Waived Alien Exemption When Drafted---Received a Bad Wound.

Another New Bedford man who brought glory to the Stars and Stripes overseas, although the flag was not formerly his own, has returned to his home in this city with the honors of war. He is Private Joseph Neckler, of 126 River road, who displays with pride a citation from Brigadier General Lindsey, commanding the 164th infantry brigade, awarded for exceptional bravery on patrol duty in the St. Mihiel offensive.

Private Joseph Neckler.

Neckler has only been in this country five years. He was born in Syria and his parents are still there. He was working for the New Bedford Copper company when the United States went to war. Neckler registered for the draft in division two and when he was called before the board, he did not claim exemption. He could speak only a few words of English but he was very much American when he marched away to camp with one of the first draft contingents on October 4, 1917.

The young man's citation is dated May 4, 1919 and reads as follows:

"It is with particular pride that the brigade commander announces to the command the splendid conduct of the following officers and soldiers in action against the enemy as described after their respective names. These splendid examples of courage and heroism are typical of the finest type of American soldier.

"Private Joseph Neckler, Co. I, 328th infantry.

"In the St. Mihiel offensive September 15, 1918, Private Neckler showed exceptionally great work on patrols, going forward in the face of heavy shell-fire and machine gun fire, advancing steadily in this attack until badly wounded. While holding trench sectors, Private Neckler was a valuable man for patrolling, successfully carrying out several dangerous missions on night patrols."

Private Neckler was wounded in the left leg by a piec of shrapnel on September 15 last and was sent to a base hospital where he was confined three months.

He returned to this country a few days ago and besides his service stripes, and his wound stripe, and his citation, he has a pretty fair vocabulary of English to show for his experiences abroad.

TWO NEW BEDFORD BROTHERS IN SERVICE

mar 16 19

WILLIAM F. KING AND JOHN T. KING.

John T. and William F. King, the sons of John King of 2 Spruce street, are both serving in Germany with the army of occupation. The former is serving with Co. D, 1st ammunition train, while the latter is with the 302nd supply company.

A recent letter received here from John T. King tells of his adventures to date. The letter follows:

"Everything around here seems so strange, not hearing the guns roar, and not seeing the airplanes overhead, but I guess everybody is satisfied. I know that I am, for I have seen and heard enough for my part.

"We hit the lines January, 1918, and have been continually on them until the armistice was signed. We were up there the morning that it was signed. We started our work on the Toul sector, and I well remember it; we stayed there until the 26th division relieved us, then we went up on the Picardy sector. We stayed there for 77 days' work, every night. It was there we found out what we were up against. Was up with ammunition every night, and in gas. That gas is something dreadful. You are helpless when you have one of those gas masks on and are trying to work or drive a car; can hardly see with one on, as there are no lights anywhere, unless you want to die and light one yourself. Then we were released at this place by the French. We then went in for the big game on the Sossions. You, perhaps, read about the big drive on the 18th of July, 1918. We sure made the Heinnes run. I was up at the batteries when the drive opened up; it was early in the morning and it lasted for five days. Nothing left for the Heinnes to do, but beat it and those that didn't were captured. We left there and went back to the Toul sector and walked through there. Then we went to the St. Mihiel sector. Hell was the word there. Have been traveling since the armistice. Seen some beautiful places and buildings."

U. S. Radio Operator Writes Interestingly of Visit to Nice and Monte Carlo While in France.

Mrs. Josephine Terriberry of 127 Summer street has received word from her son, Warren S. Terriberry, first class radio operator on the U. S. S. Buffalo, who, at the time his mother heard from him was at the Azores.

The young man writes interestingly of his recent visit to France, contrasting the life and activity there with the inactiveness of Gibraltar, which he visited previously. He tells of an interesting visit to Nice and a still more interesting trip to the Monte Carlo Casino. He also crossed the Italian border and went a little way into Italy. "All the country, around southern France and Italy is wonderful," he writes. "I've never seen anything so beautiful before. People there seem to go in for the beautiful, which we, in America, usually neglect."

BRITTON WRITES FROM AUSTRIA

11-12 1919

Former Local Soccer Player Is Serving in Uncle Sam's Naval Forces

"Reddy" Has Visited Many Places of Interest Since He Left for Overseas.

Thomas Arthur Britton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Britton, 10 Ashley street, Cove Village, writes his parents from faraway Austria, telling of the many places he has visited since he became a member of Uncle Sam's fighting forces in the navy. "Reddy," as he is more familiarly known, was the first of the local soccer players to offer his services to the government, joining the naval coast defense in April of 1917. He spent many months at different ports in this country before he was ordered overseas with the American naval squadron, where he was assigned to duty on a submarine chaser, along with several other New Bedford boys.

Thomas A. Britton.

His letter in part is as follows:

Spalato, Austria,
Nov. 26, 1918.

Dear Parents:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and happy. I am writing this letter to inform you of the many places visited by the boat to which I belong since leaving you last April, as the censor has let up somewhat on past restrictions. When we left New London we were sent to Bermuda, making the trip in four days and staying at that port for two weeks.

On leaving Bermuda our vessel went to the Azores, off the coast of Africa, but after cruising around for five days continued on our way to Gibraltar in the Mediterranean, where I was fortunate to run into Billy Harrop about the second week of our stay at the "rock." Gibraltar is certainly one fine place and I hope to return there in the near future if everything goes well. Continuing our journey along the coast of Africa, touched at Algiers and Bizert, proceeding to our "base" at Corfu by way of Malta. Our base is a large island off the coast of Greece and I have spent five months there since leaving the U. S.

I have been fortunate in being allowed to visit Italy on three occasions, spending a week there at one time, while I also spent a short furlough on the island of Sicily. Last week we were ordered to this place to take over two large battleships and I was aboard them for nine days, following which we were sent back to our own boats. The reason I have not written oftener is that we have never been sure where our location would be two days together, and we have certainly been kept on the move. There is no occasion to worry, however, as I am having the time of my life so far, and present indications point to an early return home for us.

Saved Man from Drowning.

Had rather an exciting time of it last night when we fished an old man out of the water and saved him from drowning. I was running a small boat and had been assigned to pick up the commander, who had been ashore. Just as the boat was tied up at the wharf the man fell overboard, but we managed to drag him aboard. Lucky for him, as he would undoubtedly have drowned otherwise. With the assistance of Pat Boyle, my chum, we took him ashore and left him at a nearby church in care of three priests, who put him to bed little the worse for his immersion. The priests entertained us and would not allow us to return until we had accepted their hospitality. These people certainly do like the Yankees and I will tell you lots of things on my return.

I am up in the Adriatic sea, three hundred miles and the place is right across from Ancona, Italy, situated on the coast of Austria. You can locate it by a look at the map. Will close now with love to all, and will write again from my next stop. Give my regards to all the boys.

Thomas A. Britton.

BROTHERS IN ARMY AND NAVY

Cleremont and Clarence Lemos Both See Service Over There With Fighting Forces.

may 4 - 1919

Cleremont Lemos and his brother, Sergeant Clarence Lemos of the Medical corps, will, in all probability, be reunited shortly as both boys will be discharged before many more months elapse. Cleremont is already out of the navy and his brother will come home when his division is relieved from the army of occupation. Cleremont made eight trips to France on the U. S. S. Huron as a pharmicist, taking care of the returning wounded.

While engaged in this work he had the pleasure of taking care of the late Theodore Roosevelt's son, Captain Archie Roosevelt. He was commended for his work during the influenza epidemic. He has the heartiest praise for the Knights of Columbus, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross for their help to the boys of his ship.

The following letter tells of the experiences of Top Sergeant Clarence Lemos in the Medical corps over there:

Bad Neuenahr, Germany,
March 7, 1919.

Dear Friend:

Having served as a soldier in the United States for about fifteen months and after many unsuccessful efforts to get transferred to an overseas organization, I eventually had my long desired wish fulfilled by being transferred in the latter part of last summer to exacuation hospital No. 26, which proceeded immediately to the port of embarkation.

It was my good fortune to get on one of the largest transports, the Olympic by name. This boat was manned by English sailors. Before the entrance of the United States into the world's conflict this boat was used to transport Canadian soldiers and has carried as high as 20,000 men at one time.

Much to the disappointment of the sailors as well as ourselves, the trip was uneventful, and was made in seven days. For the first five days we were not conveyed, but during the last two days we were welcomed by United States destroyers and submarines, also by English aeroplanes and aerial balloons.

We landed at Southampton about 7 p. m. and marched without delay to a rest camp and reached there about 12 o'clock midnight. At 5 a. m. we were awakened and had our breakfast and by 1 p. m. that day we were marching back to the pier to get a boat that took us across the English channel where we had little, if any sleep.

At the break of day we were much elated to see that we were in France and could distinctly see French signs which were attached to different buildings, which at that time did not mean much to most of us as we did not comprehend their meaning. Finally the following order was announced: "Packs on and Ashore." When all the men had gone ashore and were together was such whooping and hurrahing that I never heard before. The name of the place was Cherbourg.

After having a soldiers' breakfast who is traveling in war time which is practically nil, we started on a march of seven miles through rain and mud which gave us the real experience of walking in this mud we have read so much about, and I can say that it is anything but pleasant, especially when carrying a pack. It was an English rest camp that we reached after our long march and it was there that we first saw German prisoners.

Well we remained there until the next day and bear in mind that this and the one in England which we were in are what they call rest camps.

Our next stop was at Le Mans where we stayed for three days. This was a forwarding camp which is very much lie the rest camp which we stopped at before coming here.

It is quite impossible for me to relate all the cities and experiences which we had at them, but a few of the large cities which we stopped at are Tours, Orleans and Troyes. We were also at Verdun where we had innumerable experiences.

After remaining in France for several months we were sent to Germany to join the army of occupation and we are now about 30 miles from Coblenz in a town by the name of Bad Neuenahr which is located on the Rhine river.

At present we are working in conjunction with the 42nd or Rainbow division as it is better known.

From all indications now we will be here for several months. However, looking over our hardships and troubles we are well satisfied as we have seen the enemy conquered and are now well into their country.

I might add that I am the only New Bedford boy in this company but have the pleasure of having one boy from our sister city—Fall River—by the name of Sergeant Edward Sullivan of Buffington street.

With best wishes to all the New Bedford people, I remain,

First Class Sergeant Clarence Lemos,
103 Dartmouth street, New Bedford, Mass.

Army Chaplain Writes Corp. Edward Sullivan Is in Army of Occupation.

Discontinuance of Allotment and Failure to Hear from Him Caused Mother Worry

After she had mourned her son, Corporal Edward Sullivan, as dead, through failure to hear from him since early August and the discontinuance of her government allotment, a communication received this morning by Mrs. Eliza Sullivan of 230 State street, shattered her false theory and announced her "dead" son as very much alive, and now "somewhere in Germany" with the third army of occupation.

Corporal Edward Sullivan.

The letter was from Chaplain J. J. Gandy of the 38th Infantry, to which Corporal Sullivan is attached. During the July offensive, Corporal Sullivan fought through thick and thin with his contingent of "doughboys," and since then Mrs. Sullivan had failed to hear from him. Closely following the failure of tidings concerning her son's fate came the sudden discontinuance of her allotment.

Chaplain Gandy's letter follows:

My Dear Mrs. Sullivan:

Your letter of inquiry regarding your son, Corporal Edward Sullivan, has been received. I know you will be most happy to know that he is with his company "somewhere in Germany" and in the best of health. I spoke with him tonight (January 1) and told him to write you at once. I think his failure to send you some word of himself was due chiefly to the fact that our regiment has been on the constant march and in the field since the offensive began and writing has been
